RFC to Make Loans Adding Millions for PWA Grants

Jones' Agency to Lend on Revenue Producing Projects.

Agreement Leaves Ickes Wider Scope

Can Conserve Money for More Outright Gifts to Big Projects.

By the Associated Press.

Jesse Jones threw huge resources of his Reconstruction Finance Corporation behind the Public Works program last night, making possible large expansion of the pump-priming operations through which the Administration hopes to hasten recovery.

Jones and PWA Administrator Ickes, two "big money" men of President Roosevelt's spending-lending program, agreed that wherever possible RFC would make loans for public construction and PWA would conserve its money exclusively for outright grants. Hitherto, PWA has been making both loans and grants.

Under the new system it will be possible, officials said, to undertake more big projects such as roads and bridges than if PWA had to furnish all the money itself. The last Congress gave Jones' agency power to lend $1,500,000,000 to States, cities and business men.

Jones Confirms Plan.

High officials said:

"Jones and Ickes have been exploring the possibility of RFC making loans on projects requiring dollars by the millions, and their minds have met.

"They have decided that it is feasible in law and in practice for municipalities to get grants from PWA and loans from RFC on contracts set up by the former."

Later Jones himself confirmed this, saying that at the request of Ickes "the Reconstruction Finance Corporation now is considering some loans." He did not indicate just what applications were being considered, but said his agency and Ickes were "in accord" on the proposition of RFC aiding the PWA program.

Other officials explained that RFC co-operation would be limited to revenue-producing projects such as roads, bridges, subways and others designed to pay off the loan from toll charges.

N. Y. Tunnel Likely Use.

New York's proposed $70,000,000 tunnel from the Battery to Hamilton avenue in Brooklyn, officials said, possibly would be one of the first co-operative RFC-PWA enterprises. They mentioned Pennsylvania's proposed $60,000,000 "all weather" highway and Chicago's $35,000,000 "Loop" subway.

Mayor LaGuardia, they said, proposed joint development of the New York project in a recent conference here with Jones and Ickes. He suggested RFC lend the 55 per cent of the construction cost required of the city and PWA put up the usual 45 per cent grant.

While no formal action was taken at that time, officials said the conference stirred up the Jones-Ickes discussions which led to yesterday's decision that teamwork was feasible.

They represented Jones as willing to lend on revenue bonds if they were bolstered by Government grants of 45 per cent of a project's cost. He felt the success of a revenue project was made doubly secure if it started out with a grant.

This too, they continued, might influence RFC to reduce interest where applied to PWA loans. Observers pointed out that Jones consistently has said he had "no fixed

U. S. Bar Lays Class Hatred To Labor Act

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, July 27.—The American Bar Association's committee on labor, employment, and social security attacked the national labor relations act as promoting class antagonism and described the social security act as "ineptly drawn" in a report to be submitted to the association's convention tomorrow.

Developments of the past year, the committee reported, had deepened its conviction of a year ago that the Wagner act should be amended to make it less one sided. Immediate revision of the social security act, notably to substitute a "pay-as-you-go-policy" for the present old-age reserve account, was also recommended by the committee.

The committee report renewed an attack on Federal administrative agencies that has marked the proceedings of the sixty-first convention of the American Bar Association here for the past three days. Today's many-sided program, however, ranging over many fields of legal activity, included a grave session on the present plight and gloomy future of the Nation's railroads.

Leslie Craven, former counsel to the Government's abandoned co-ordination program, predicted railroads face financial collapse and ultimately Government ownership, because of "labor royalists, old-fashioned methods of management and Congressional failure to restore order to a sick industry."

Judge R. V. Fletcher, general counsel and vice president of the Association of American Railroads, advocated wiping the whole body of Loyalist Attack.

By the United Press.

Loyalist Headquarters, Near Racquera, July 27.—Government columns tonight cut their way hand-to-hand into Gandesa, insurgent Gen. Franco's divisional headquarters, at the focus of a savage offensive on the Catalonian border.

The loyalists hurled 75,000 men into the attack on this front, their advancing line stretching 95 miles northward, from Amposta, on the Mediterranean, along the Ebro Valley to Ribarroja. The offensive had gained 20 miles tonight.

Franco halted his Valencia offensive and rushed 20,000 of his crack troops northward across 80 miles of rugged mountains in an effort to throw back the government's Catalonian thrust and avert collapse of one of his most vital lines of communication.

Italian Blackshirts and African Moors were relinquishing Gandesa before the cold steel of a loyalist unit of 22,000 headed by international brigades which whipped the Italians at Guadalajara above Madrid last year.

Government officers at the front reported capture of 7,000 prisoners, mostly Italians and Moroccans, as the spearhead of the surprise offensive splattered the streets of Gandesa with deadly fire. Franco captured Gandesa last April 2.

Government field headquarters reported that Gandesa—a key to strategic highways spreading out in spider-web fashion and vital to Franco's attack on Valencia in the south—could not long hold out against heavy fire. The famous Lister and Campesino divisions already were fighting in the eastern outskirts of the town.

U. S. Gold Hoard, 13 Billion, 55 Pct. Of World Supply

The Treasury disclosed yesterday that its gold holdings had passed the $13,000,000,000 mark, the highest in history. A purchase of $2,822,000 in gold on July 25, increased the stocks to $13,000,339,409.

The Treasury now has 371,438,268 ounces of the metal, or approximately 55 per cent of the world's estimated monetary gold stocks.

About $5,000,000,000 of the gold is in underground vaults at Fort Knox, Ky., and the remainder in various Treasury mints and assay offices.

Since January 31, 1934, when the dollar was devalued, the Government has been paying $35 a fine ounce for gold.

Chaplain Discloses Fist Fight With Lt. Col. Giffin's Accuser

By the United Press.

New York, July 27.—A fighting Army chaplain spoke up today in defense of Lieut. Col. Stewart S. Giffin, charged with conduct unbecoming an officer, and told a court martial the colonel's accuser was a "deliberate liar" with whom he once had a fist fight.

The accuser, Lieut. James O. Smith, who professed great dismay at the colonel's drinking habits, testified and made the point that he would not have filed the charges if Giffin had lent him money.

"If he had handed me a couple of bucks when I went to him for help," Smith testified, "and said, 'Here, you poor bum, go get yourself a cup of coffee,' I'd not have filed the charges."

Testimony was concluded tonight. The court-martial will reconvene later in the evening and begin deliberating a verdict.

The charges were that Giffin, on six occasions, had had too much to drink and had so far forgotten himself as to sing "Charmaine" with war veterans, drive an ice wagon up his driveway, and become boisterous in a restaurant. Giffin has denied drinking to excess.

Smith also admitted under cross-examination that, by misrepresenting its contents, he persuaded a waitress to sign an affidavit that Giffin had been drunk and disorderly.

It developed also Giffin had kept Smith and his wife in Giffin's home for three months when the lieutenant, a reserve officer, was out of

'Little Steel Spy' Organized Union

HAROLD F. VARGO. CHARLES FAGAN.

Admitted Strikebreaker Describes System to Senators.

By the Associated Press.

Grim-faced union men and a former strikebreaker filed before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee yesterday and, between arguments among themselves, told a story of labor spying as conducted by the Republic Steel Corporation.

Harold F. Vargo, who readily conceded he had operated as a company agent under the names of Richard Brooks and Ira Alberts, testified while in the employ of Republic's police department he helped organize and became financial secretary of a C. I. O. union in Republic's Youngstown plant.

Later he was on the picket line, during the bitter strike in "Little Steel" a year ago, but before he had resigned his union post at the request of other union officials. Union men told the committee Vargo was suspected of turning the union's membership roll over to the company.

Vargo testified:

"I was asked to resign because they said some members didn't like my attitude, but that wasn't the

Cardenas Hints No Arbitration Of U.S. Protest

Willing to Pay for Lands Expropriated if Democracies Buy Oil.

By the United Press.

Mexico City, July 27.—President Lazaro Cardenas intimated today that Mexico will reject the United States' demand for arbitration of the question of expropriation of American-owned farm lands by the Mexican government.

Mexico considers that there is nothing to be gained by arbitration as the government previously had expressed its desire to make indemnities, provided no cash payment was demanded, the President indicated at a luncheon of the Foreign Press Corps.

Cardenas announced that his government would reply to the note of Secretary of State Cordell Hull next week. He said Mexico was anxious to pay for everything expropriated, but that this was impossible unless the government is able to sell petroleum abroad.

While the President refused directly to discuss the agrarian question because it is "now a matter of diplomatic discussion," his intimations were interpreted by informed observers as a clear indication that Mexico will reject the arbitration demand, unless new developments arise during the next week.

The President reiterated that return of petroleum properties to their former American and British owners was out of the question. He admitted, however, that Mexico cannot make cash payment for the expropriated properties.

"Mexico does not ask financial help of any country," he said. "It does not seek any loan. It considers that the payment for expropriated property on the installment plan does not violate international law.

"If no difficulties are placed in Mexico's way it will be able to pay with money from the sale of petroleum. Mexico, as I have often said in the past, is anxious to sell oil only to democratic nations."

Court Ruling Spurs Group Health Drive

Jubliant Officials Plan to Seek 700 New Members.

Justice Bailey's Decision Believed First of Its Kind in U. S.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Group Health Association last night moved speedily toward increasing its membership 30 per cent and expanding its clinic facilities, following a District court decision establishing the organization's legality.

When the board of trustees meets next Monday, a report will be submitted by the advisory committee recommending that 700 more Federal employes be taken into G. H. A.—present membership is 2,600—and that the clinic be enlarged in proportion.

Jubilant over yesterday's ruling by Justice Jennings Bailey, the advisory committee, which directly represents the G. H. A. membership, heard the association's president, William C. Kirkpatrick, hail the court action as a victory over an "obstinate minority."

The reference was interpreted as being directed at the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society, which have fought the association's activities since it began administering medical care to Government workers on a co-operative basis last November.

Gratified by Decision.

"The members of Group Health Association are highly gratified at Justice Bailey's decision," said Kirkpatrick.

"They feel their objective has been amply justified.

"The association will go forward with its plans for expansion.

"The decision is striking evidence of the fact that when a group of American citizens embarks on a legal undertaking to promote their welfare, they shall not be interfered with."

It was learned the owner of the property at 1328 I street northwest, where the G. H. A. clinic is located, has broached the idea of adding another floor to provide for expansion. Kirkpatrick said this suggestion will be considered by the trustees next Monday.

Decision Is Clear Cut.

In a decision, importance of which will be felt throughout the country, Justice Jennings Bailey held the Federal employes' health plan is neither a corporation illegally practicing medicine nor an outlaw insurance company.

His is believed to be the first court ruling ever handed down on this type of group practice, pre-payment plan, which has sprung up in dozens of cities the last few years.

Schemes to Sway Vote In Tennessee Charged By Senate Committee

Walsh Brands Primary Tactics 'Worse Than Gutter Politics.'

Hopkins Cleared Of Polls Coercion

Investigation Planned of Alleged 'Shakedown' for McAdoo.

By William V. Nessly.

Every possible "scheme and questionable device" for raising funds to influence votes and control an election result apparently is "in full swing" in the Tennessee Democratic Senatorial primary, the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee charged yesterday.

It hinted at prosecution of those guilty and forecast a contest in the Senate itself, regardless of which candidate wins, to determine whether the winner should be seated, in view of probable "excessive" expenditures.

"Worse than gutter politics" was the characterization given the Tennessee situation by Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, member of the committee.

Chief Democratic Senatorial candidates in Tennessee are Senator George L. Berry, millionaire labor leader, who is backed by the State machine of Gov. Gordon Browning, and Tom Stewart, candidate of the famous Memphis machine of Ed Crump, and backed also by Senator Kenneth McKellar. Candidates of less importance are John R. Neal who filed complaints against the Berry and Stewart forces, C. L. Powell, and J. Ridley Mitchell.

Exonerate Hopkins.

The Senate investigating committee, headed by Senator Morris Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, issued its comments after hearing an investigator it had sent to Tennessee to look into charge of improper political practices. After the partial report, the group decided to send six investigators into the State to delve further into the startling situation uncovered.

In addition, the committee, at its specially called meeting:

Asked Postmaster General Farley to investigate an alleged abuse of the franking privilege by the Farm Security Administration in mailing letters favorable to former Gov. Tom Berry, of South Dakota, in his campaign for the Democratic Senatorial nomination.

Held not to constitute coercion the recent statement by Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins that 90 per cent of those on relief would vote for President Roosevelt, presumably for a third term, though Hopkins shied away from direct reference to the third term.

Decided to investigate charges that Federal employes are being "shaken down" for a part of their salaries to help re-elect Senator William G. McAdoo.

Returned its investigator to Pennsylvania for further inquiry after he had reported finding one charge unfounded.

Dropped consideration of charges in newspapers against Senator Bennett C. Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, until the charges are made officially.

Notified Gov. William Langer of North Dakota that it would investigate his charges of intimidation of WPA workers after the primaries just ahead are out of the way.

Delayed action on the Kentucky struggle, where Senator Alben Barkley is opposed by Gov. A. B. Chandler, until investigations of complaints on both sides have been made.

Ordered an investigation into the complaint by Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), of Georgia, anti-New Dealer, that the State director of the National Emergency Council had been re-

Smith-Dodd Primary Fight Gets Rougher

Both Declare Posters Are Ripped Down; Red Charge Denied.

By Edward T. Folliard

The primary election fight between Representative Howard W. Smith and William E. Dodd, jr., gets increasingly rough. Last night a spokesman for the Dodd forces charged campaign posters bearing that young man's likeness were being ripped from trees and telephone poles. Not so long ago, there were complaints that Smith posters were getting the same treatment.

Such political passion is strange in Virginia's Eighth Congressional District, an area which in the past has taken its politics more or less serenely. But looked at from the standpoint of traditional politics, this is a strange campaign. George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and James Monroe, all of whom lived in the area, certainly would think it so.

Yesterday 32-year-old Candidate Dodd climbed into his sound truck and campaigned through Loudoun County, saying Smith had betrayed the New Deal by his votes in the House and calling on them to support President Roosevelt by electing him to Smith's seat.

Mr. Dodd also denied emphatically that he was a Communist. Against the "advice of many of my friends," but just to keep the record straight, he made the denial in a letter to Crandall Mackay, editorial writer of the Arlington Chronicle, which newspaper last week proclaimed it was "unmasking the Dodd Menace."

"I categorically deny," Dodd wrote, 'that I am or ever have been

Earle Victor In First Test To Curb Jury

Pennsylvania House Ready to Vote End of Foes' County Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 27.—Riding roughshod over a flurry of Republican opposition, Democratic strength today placed the bulk of Gov. George H. Earle's program to check a grand jury investigation in position for final consideration in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives.

Voting in concert, the big Democratic majority amended and passed on second reading four of five administration measures, designed to take over the projected Dauphin County inquiry of Earle and 12 associates.

A fifth bill—providing that all grand jury investigations of civil officers subject to impeachment be held in public—was withheld and Floor Leader Herbert Cohen indicated it might be "pickled."

"It really isn't essential to the investigation program," he explained, "and there is a serious doubt as to its constitutionality.

"We're absolutely certain that the other four bills are valid . . ."

Most significant of the amendments was one which would stiffen the penalty that could be imposed upon anyone who withheld evidence and records the Legislature sought.

The bill was changed to allow imprisonment for contempt of this nature until the 1939 regular session discharged the prisoner. Previously, the imprisonment would have been merely "until discharged."

Gov. Earle's chief objective is to force District Attorney Carl B. Shelley, who is conducting the

Chincoteague Fishermen Turn Cowboy for Annual Pony Drive

By Marshall Andrews.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chincoteague, Va., July 27.—A score of island fishermen turned Tom Mix here today and drove to Chincoteague Island 300 shaggy little ponies from four islands lying across the bays and inlets that abound in this place.

Their boots had no high heels and no long-shanked spurs; they were rubber and not too new. On their heads were the white caps of seamen instead of 10-gallon Stetsons. Behind them were no rolling prairies but the broad Atlantic, grey in the dimming sun.

Fishermen and volunteer firemen rolled into one, these herders completed all but one phase of the fourteenth annual pony penning on Chincoteague Island. Tomorrow 150 more ponies will be driven to the pens built just off the town's main street and the lot will be offered at auction to the public at large.

New Cultural Relations Unit Set Up in U. S.

Dr. Cherrington Is Named Head of Division Created by Hull.

The United States took another step in furthering its good neighbor policy yesterday, when a Division of Cultural Relations in the State Department was created by Secretary Hull. Dr. Ben M. Cherrington was named head of the division.

Designed officially to promote better relations between the United States and all other countries, the agency is expected to have particular application to the task of increasing inter-American amity.

Secretary Hull's departmental order said:

"The new division will have general charge of official international activities of this department with respect to cultural relations, embracing the exchange of professors, teachers and students; co-operation in the field of music, art, literature and other intellectual and cultural attainments; the formulation and distribution of libraries of representative works of the United States and suitable translations thereof; the preparations for and management of the participation by this Government in international expositions in this field; supervision of participation by this Government in international radio broadcasts; encouragement of a closer relationship between unofficial organizations of this and of foreign governments engaged in cultural and intellectual activities, and, generally, the dissemination abroad of the representative intellectual and cultural works of the United States and the improvement and broadening of the scope of our cultural relations with other countries."

He added that it would direct fulfillment of this country's obligations under the Convention for Promotion of Inter-American Cultural Relations and co-operate with the National Committee on Inter-American Intellectual Co-operation, various Government departments and foreign missions.

The division will function under the general supervision of Under Secretary Welles, who, in a radio talk last night, pointed out that the foreign offices of the principal governments of the world have similar divisions.

"Whereas some of these governments have most elaborate establishments with large appropriations, for propaganda purposes," he remarked, "the one which we are now setting up will have a staff of eight persons including clerical personnel. Congress appropriated $27,920 to pay their total annual salaries . . . It is obvious that this is not a propaganda agency. We have no reason to undertake any form of propaganda with our friends and neighbors in the Western Hemisphere. We will, of course, look to the educational institutions and other private organizations interested in international cultural activities to co-operate with us in carrying the financial burden, the fruits of which I am confident will enrich the lives of our own people as well as our neighbors."

Dr. Cherrington for 12 years has been director of a program of public education in world affairs sponsored by the Foundation for the Advancement of the Social Sciences of the University of Denver, endowed by James H. Causey, formerly of Denver, now a resident of New York City.

Nazi Fliers to Ring World, Landing in Alaska and U. S.

The German round-the-world flight, for which Berlin has asked permission for landing in Alaska and the United States, will start in August or September, the German Embassy revealed yesterday.

The plane, an official said, will carry a crew of six, commanded by Capt. Henke, a pilot of long experience. Co-pilot will be Capt. Von Moreau. The remainder of the crew will be composed of a navigator, radio operator and mechanics.

The liner, a four-motored Condor manufactured by the Focke Wulf German Co., after leaving Germany will fly to India, China, Japan, Alaska and San Francisco. The plane's performance up to the time it reaches the United States will determine the itinerary during the rest of the trip. The official said, however, the aircraft probably would fly non-stop to New York and then try the Atlantic hop.

The Germans, not attempting to rival Howard Hughes globe-girdling venture, characterize their flight as a series of long-distance tests.

Parley to Draft State Model of Pay-Hour Law

Secretary Perkins to Call Conference to Aid Legislatures.

Secretary Perkins soon will call a conference of State labor executives to draft a model State wage-hour law to supplement the new Federal legislation.

A Labor Department official said yesterday about a dozen men would be invited to the meeting, probably late in August.

Any measure which they approve can be submitted to more than 40 legislatures meeting next January. Thus a few months after the Federal legislation becomes effective in October, many States may set up similar wage-hour standards for the millions of workers employed in intrastate industries not subject to the Federal law.

The conference method of working out a model law was recommended to Secretary Perkins after her return from Europe by V. A. Zimmer, chief of the division of labor standards.

Seeks Reasonable Uniformity.

Zimmer said he had received a dozen requests from State officials for information on standards which should be included in State laws.

Federal officials want to meet these requests with a model which will stand constitutionality tests and establish reasonably uniform wage and hour standards.

They also desire, it was said, to eliminate as rapidly as possible inequalities which may arise from competition under the Federal law. They cite in this regard a company operating in interstate commerce which must compete with a purely intra-State company. The latter, without a State law, would not have to maintain the same labor standards as the interstate concern.

Oklahoma, Pennsylvania Reversed.

So far only Oklahoma has enacted a measure approximating the Federal law, but it was held unconstitutional several months ago. The court indicated that had it been drawn differently it would have been upheld.

A Pennsylvania law setting up maximum hour standards for men suffered a similar fate but for different reasons. The court held that it delegated too much power to an administrator who could alter the specified 44-hour week maximum as he saw fit.

The Federal program will impose at the outset a maximum 44-hour work week and minimum 25-cent hour wages for all employes in interstate commerce.

Replacements during the first three weeks of July have brought the Civilian Conservation Corps to its full authorized enrollment of 300,000 men, plus about 11,500 Indians and residents of Territories, officials announced yesterday. The corps is operating 1,500 camps, and these will be maintained throughout the fiscal year.

Fritz Kreisler contended yesterday the income-tax people were wrong in asking him to come across with $224,980. Vote-Buying in Tennessee Is Charged by Senate Inquiry

Funds

moved "probably" because he supported George.

Directed an investigator to study alleged misuse of Federal road funds in the Illinois Senatorial contest, and assertions that WPA supervisors in Owen County, Indiana, were intimidated for political purposes.

The committee's statement on Tennessee said:

"The information the committee has received from its investigator in Tennessee has led it to send additional investigators at once into that State. The committee is of the opinion that if the evidence already before it with respect to assessments of Federal employes by one group participating in the Democratic primary contest for United States Senator and of State employes by the other group points sharply toward an election contest in the United States Senate regardless of which group's candidate triumphs.

"Apparently every scheme and questionable device that can be used in a political contest to raise funds to influence votes and control the election result is in full swing. Regardless of action that may be taken in the courts to punish those practicing illegal election methods and those exercising political pressure, there are indications that the Senate may be called upon to consider the probability of excessive money being used in behalf of the victorious candidates."

It said that although airmail charges sent by James W. Mellen, anti-New Deal Senate candidate, against McAdoo in California had not been received, "on the strength of the telegrams forecasting what the charges are, an investigation is sure to be made."

Chan Gurney, Yankton, S. Dak., Republican Senate candidate, called the committee's attention to franked press letter which he said was sent out by the Farm Security Administration of the Department of Agriculture on behalf of Gov. Berry.

Senator Sheppard revealed he had immediately written to Postmaster General Farley asking an investigation. He said the letter, calling attention to work that had been done by Berry in 1936, "while pretending to be information with respect to the FSA, is in reality a political circular."

Veiled Effort.

"We call your attention," he added, "to the fact that facts referred to in this circular took place approximately two years ago, namely, 1936, but the Department of Agriculture did not circularize these facts until the person named in the circular had become the nominee of one of the political parties on July 5, 1938.

"These franked letters contain what your committee believes is a veiled if not a direct effort to influence votes in behalf of a candidate for public office in South Dakota."

He told Farley he expected "that you will have an investigation made of the use of the frank privilege by a department of the Government for what appears to be a political purpose," and asked "what action you propose to take, if you agree with our views, to prevent repetitions of the misuse of the frank in such cases in the future."

The Missouri charges passed over by the committee consisted of newspaper clippings in which Joseph T. Davis, candidate against Senator Clark, charged Clark was assessing and collecting campaign funds from the personnel of the HOLC and FHA, as well as from employes of the Federal district attorney in Missouri.

Of the Hopkins' statement that at least 90 per cent of WPA workers would "vote for Mr. Roosevelt without being told," the committee said: "His statement regarding his belief as to what proportion of relief would vote for Mr. Roosevelt was in response to a direct question at a press conference and was in no way a coercion of or dictation to workers connected with relief. Such statements are to be distinguished from those that are in the nature of political advice to or that indicate an intention to exert political pressure upon workers paid from relief funds or from beneficiaries of relief funds."

During the day the committee received from Gov. Chandler, seeking Barkley's seat, frank admission that "political considerations, as well as qualifications, of appointees" have influenced appointments to jobs in his State administration. He said in his reply to the committee questionnaire that, except for technical jobs, State department heads, "with my consent and approval, have undertaken to exercise care to select and appoint friends of mine and of my administration."

Ralph Burton, committee investigator in the Kentucky fight, reported at yesterday's meeting on charges of intimidation of WPA workers, but was instructed to go, also, into allegtaions that Chandler forces have been using the State's old-age pension payments in the interests of his candidacy.

L. K. Smith to Head U.S. Crop Insurance

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation's board of directors announced today resignation of Roy M. Green as manager of the corporation, to become general agent for the Farm Credit Administration's Ninth district.

The board said Leroy K. Smith, a Nebraska wheat farmer and chief of the corporation's operating section, would replace Green as acting manager until it made a permanent appointment.

Smith, a native of Macedonia, Iowa, and resident of Chase County, Nebr., since 1920, came to Washington last April to aid in coordinating field activities of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration with those of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation.

He was appointed chairman of the Nebraska State Grain Board in 1935 and served on the Nebraska State Agricultural Conservation Committee from 1936 until he came to Washington.

N. Y. Registration Trip.

Martin Charged With Linking Lewis to 'Reds'

Auto Union Chief Denies Accusation at Trial of Ousted Aides.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 27.—John L. Lewis' name was brought into the trial of four suspended vice presidents of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers today and a defense attorney promptly charged Homer Martin, U. A. W. president, was trying to link Lewis with what Martin has termed a Communist conspiracy to wreck the union.

Martin emphatically denied the assertion, made by Maurice Sugar, and said it indicated Sugar's "persistent attempt to misrepresent the facts."

Sugar said the first witness at the trial, F. J. Michel, U. A. W. executive board member from Racine, Wis., told of a board meeting at Washington in April, 1937, at which Lewis requested permission to name an administrator for the union.

Confirms Lewis Request.

Martin confirmed this but said Lewis' request was made on representations from the officers now under suspension, and "when he learned the true situation he dropped the suggestion."

Sugar charged Michael's testimony indicated the Martin group "contends that Lewis was one of the 'conspirators' aligned with the defendants in delivering the international union to the Communist Party."

Larry S. Davidow, U. A. W. counsel, had charged the proposed appointment of an administrator resulted from an attempt by the "unity" faction in the executive board to seize control of the union.

Five Former Officers on Trial.

George Addes, ousted secretary-treasurer of the U. A. W. and Wyndham Mortimer and Ed Hall, suspended vice presidents now on trial, were members of the "unity" group. The others being tried on charges brought by Martin are Vice Presidents Richard T. Frankensteen and Walter Wells.

Charges Davidbw said would be proved against the suspended officers included:

That the "unity" group was "dominated by Communists," and that Robert Travis, U. A W. organizer in Flint, Mich., in 1937, was trying to get Communists into strategic posts to put the "unity" faction in control.

That Frankeinsteen invited Martin and a committee to meet with Communist Party leaders at Mortimer's home.

That the suspended officers plotted to seize control of the U. A. W. executive board at its June, 1938, meeting.

Faulty Propeller Caused Montana Crash, U. S. Finds

Improper adjustment of a propeller mechanism was cited yesterday as the cause of the crash of the Northwest Airlines transport plane at Billings, Mont., July 8, in which one passenger was killed.

The plane left the ground "in a stalled condition from which the pilot attempted to recover by use of full emergency power while within the boundaries of the airport," a Bureau of Air Commerce investigating board reported.

"Emergency power," the report continued, "was not available to the pilot because of improper adjustment to a stop which had been placed on the quadrant of the propeller pitch control levers, preventing the levers from going to the full low pitch position."

As a result the plane fell off on the right wing and crashed 1,100 feet beyond the runway, fatally injuring Mrs. N. S. Mackie, of Evanston, Ill. Seven other passengers and two crew members aboard were not seriously injured.

TVA Counsel Scores Morgan As 'Interferer'

Ousted Chairman's Action in Utility Suit Assailed at Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 27.—James Lawrence Fly, TVA general counsel, charged Dr. Arthur E. Morgan today with "unwarranted interference" in the 18-company power suit against the Government agency at Chattanooga last winter.

The witness told a Congressional committee investigating the Tennessee Valley Authority that the ousted chairman's conduct in the case was "wholly unpredictable."

At one time, Fly said, Dr. Morgan challenged the "integrity" of defense counsel with accusations they had put TVA engineers "under pressure" for "misleading and misrepresentative evidence," the witness stated.

Engineers Embarrassed.

The case, in which private utilities attacked constitutionality of the Authority, is now pending before the Supreme Court.

Previously Dr. Morgan testified engineers were "embarrassed" by requests for evidence which he considered misleading, but which was not used in the trial.

He referred particularly to a report by E. L. Chandler, TVA costs estimate engineer, who was asked for separate estimates on two systems of single-purpose dams, one for flood control and one for navigation purposes.

Morgan contended this report tended to show, erroneously, that the cost of producing power was negligible as compared to flood control and navigation costs.

"No intelligent child could misunderstand it," Fly said of the Chandler report.

Former-Aide Backs Morgan.

TVA engineers earlier testified they were not subjected to pressure nor "embarrassed" by requests from the attorneys, explaining they prepared hypothetical figures on dam costs to controvert similar evidence prepared by the private utilities.

Carl A. Bock, chief consulting engineer for TVA and former assistant to Dr. Morgan, testified that in his opinion the Chandler report was "misleading" and that engineers had been put "under pressure" by attorneys.

"My opinion is," said Bock, "some of the engineers were under some embarrassment."

Witnesses who said they were not "embarrassed" by the attorney's requests, or subjected to pressure, were Robert A. Monroe, water control engineer, George W. Foster and Dana Wood, hydraulic engineers.

Maytag Pay Deadlock Continues; Troops Stay

Newton, Iowa, July 27 (AP).—Newton completed its eighth day of military occupation by the Iowa National Guard tonight, with little change in the Maytag Washing Machine pay cut controversy that brought about martial law.

The National Labor Relations Board hearing into unfair labor practices brought against the company by the striking C. I. O. Union continued.

Final Texas Returns Set Beckworth-Gentry Duel

Dallas, Tex., July 27 (AP).—The Texas election bureau today said complete returns from the Third Congressional District showed Representative Morgan Sanders, veteran member of the House, had been unseated.

Twenty-five-year-old Lindley Beckworth, advocate of old-age pension increase and staunch admirer of President Roosevelt, and Brady Gentry, Smith County judge, will meet in the run-off August 17. Final totals were: Beckworth 14,096; Gentry 13,439, and Sanders 13,242.

886,950 HAIRS TO GROW

Between the Ages of 20 and 50

ALL of the hair which is on your scalp today will fall out and will be replaced by new hair within the next four years. This normal "hair cycle" continues as long as your scalp is healthy. Baldness comes when some local scalp disorder (such as dandruff) keeps the hair-growing structure from replacing the hair which reaches maturity and falls out. To avoid baldness you must help your scalp to re-grow 81 hairs each day—886,950 during the "danger age"—20 to 50.

The Thomas' can help you by overcoming any and all of the 14 local scalp disorders which may be leading you to baldness. When you start Thomas treatment, your dandruff disappears, abnormal hair-loss stops, and new hair starts to grow on the thin and bald spots. You need a good head of hair—and you can have it! Call today for a complete scalp examination—no charge or obligation.

Taxicab Driver District's 51st Auto Fatality

City Opens Playground Survey in Childrens' Traffic Deaths.

City officials yesterday started surveys to determine advisability of opening additional playgrounds to keep children off the streets, as Sam Bernstein, taxicab driver, became the fifty-first traffic victim of the year. Last year at this time there were 62 deaths.

Bernstein was struck as he was crossing at the 2000 block of Fourteenth street northwest. Police said he was struck by a taxicab driven by Ralph R. Winslow, 26, of Arlington. Winslow was released in custody of his attorney for coroner's action. Bernstein lived at 2129 Eighteenth street northwest.

Aid of the District PWA was offered for supervising additional playgrounds. Ross Haworth, assistant to Commissioner George E. Allen, who is also WPA administrator, said that the office would co-operate with school and playground officials "to the limit of our resources."

Investigate Child Deaths.

The surveys were started yesterday after Dr. Chester W. Holmes, acting superintendent of schools, conferred with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police. Dr. Holmes asked for a study of the six child deaths since June 1 to learn if they could have been prevented by additional play space for children.

Holmes said that the Community Center supervised 5 playgrounds and the Playground Department operated 50. Problem of the surveys, to be conducted also by the two agencies, is to determine if opening of any of the 84 playgrounds now closed would help prevent accidents by keeping children off the streets.

The surveys also will include findings on whether existing playgrounds satisfy needs of areas surrounding them and whether children must cross heavily traveled streets to reach them.

Limited Appropriations.

School, park, playground officials will meet today with Lewis R. Barrett, coordinator of the District recreation, to consider the problem.

Chief obstacle to opening additional playgrounds is lack of funds for supervisors. All agencies operating playgrounds now are straining limited appropriations to maintain supervision at grounds now open.

Police continued a campaign to keep children from playing in the streets warning parents of children found in the streets to have children go to playgrounds.

Meanwhile, correspondence of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer made public yesterday revealed that he upholds position of the Federal Government in the case of a Civil Conservation Corps worker arrested here for driving a Government owned truck, assigned in in Maryland, without an operator's permit.

Case Under Advisement.

The case has been taken under advisement until August 15 by Judge Hobart Newman in Traffic Court. George Oberholtzer, on duty at Garrett Park, is the CCC worker arrested. Van Duzer's letter, sent to Judge Newman by Louis Frick, of the National Capitol Parks office, said:

"If Virginia or Maryland or any other State does not require operators' permits for Federal owned vehicles, the District would not require those operators to have District operators' permits."

White Oaks, N. Mex., July 27 (AP).—Mike Hutta, miner, put his damp blasting caps and dynamite on a window sill to dry out and went back to bed for another nap.

He awoke, still in bed, but in his back yard with fragments of his house dropping all around him.

Hutta, scratched and bruised, figured the sun overdid the dying-out process.

Mother Holds Failure in Love Motive of Strange Death Leap

Mrs. Warde Suggests Son Frustrated in Marriage Hope; N. Y. Police Fear Wave of Incidents as Girl Imitator Is Rescued From Ledge.

By the United Press.

New York, July 27.—The mother of John W. Warde today supplied a possible motive for his strange death leap after 11 hours of indecision on a seventeenth floor ledge of the Hotel Gotham.

Friends quoted the mother as saying: "He had a passionate fondness for a woman he could never hope to marry."

There was only vague speculation about the reason for his selection of such a spectacular means to suicide. The most prevalent theory was that his manic depressive tendencies were complicated by exhibitionism, that he achieved a sense of importance in being the center of New York's horrified attention for a few hours.

With a similar attempt at suicide today by Betty Vorunion, 24, of Irvington, N. J., police feared a possible wave of such freakish incidents. Miss Vorunion was found by office workers perched on a building ledge a mile from the spot where Warde leaped. They telephoned police, who rescued her without difficulty.

Funeral arrangements were announced at Warde's home in Southampton, Long Island. After private services at a funeral home in Brooklyn burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery, Brooklyn.

Patrolman Charles V. Glasco, who for eight hours tried to persuade Warde to leave the ledge, described his efforts today.

"He made me about seven partial promises not to jump," Glasco said. "He kept saying, 'Give me time. I have to work it out.'

"He seemed rational. He never mentioned his mother or his family, except to say, 'I want to talk to my sister.'

"I called her on the phone and then handed him the phone. I thought if I could get close enough to him I might be able to get hold of him. Handing him the phone was as close as I could get."

Glasco said that at one time he proposed Warde leave the ledge with the understanding that he would be permitted to go out again.

"He seemed interested. His fingernails were bitten to the quick. I suggested he come in and wash his hands and clean up and then go back out. But he wouldn't do it."

Warde described the crowd watching him as "morons," Glasco said.

"I had an idea that I'd get him filled up with coffee and water—enough to get him to go to the bathroom. It didn't work.

"I was certainly disappointed when he finally jumped."

'Numbers' Raid Is Made Close to Police Station

Practically in the shadow of their headquarters, police yesterday raided an alleged "numbers" establishment in the 600 block of D street northwest.

Armed with a warrant from United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, the raiders, under supervision of Sergt. George Deyoe, vice squad, seized seven men in a poolroom, charged two with operating a lottery and released the others.

The men who were charged gave their names as Robert G. Shaw, colored, 50, 200 block of D street northwest, and Herman J. Robinson, colored, 38, 1400 block of New Jersey avenue northwest. They were held under $1,500 bail.

Sergt. Deyoe said several plays had been made prior to the raid and a quantity of "numbers" and race-horse slips seized.

Radium Poison Sufferer Weighs 60 Lbs. at Death

Ottawa, Ill., July 27 (U.P.).—Radium poisoning she contracted 16 years ago snuffed out the last spark of life in the shrunken body of Mrs. Catherine Donohue today, but her fight for compensation will be carried on by the other "doomed women of Ottawa."

She was the tenth to die.

Death came to the 35-year-old mother of two children before she could collect any of the $6,700 in medical expenses and awards which the Illinois Industrial Commission had ordered the Radium Dial Co. to pay her.

Mrs. Donohue testified that she weighed 120 pounds when she started working for the company in 1921. When death came her body had withered to 60 pounds.

Illness Climaxed in Landis Case Forces Blood Donor to Retire

Fire Sergt. M. C. Mason, Who Made Futile Effort to Save Murder Victim, Will Live Quietly in Florida; Suffers From Heart Condition.

A quiet spot in the shade of palm trees in a little Florida East Coast village with breezes from the ocean creeping in.

That is the life to which Fire Sergt. M. C. Mason, who gave his blood in a transfusion in a futile effort to save the life of Mrs. Blanche Gertrude Landis, will retire. Mrs. Mrs. Landis, beaten by her husband, one-time rookie fireman James L. Landis, lay dying at Casualty Hospital when physicians found Mason's type of blood matched hers.

Mason volunteered, but Mrs. Ladis died shortly afterward. Her husband is doing a life term for second degree murder.

Two days after the operation Mason became ill, although he has been on duty most of the time since then. August 1, however, he will be retired because of disability—a heart condition.

So, two weeks after his retirement becomes official, he will move to the village of Dania, Fla., with his wife and their 14-year-old daughter, Jacqueline. The three of them will live on his retirement pay of $108 a month.

The transfusion, which brought to a climax the fire sergeant's heart disease, was the fourth he has given in his life. It was the first time he had ever had any ill effects, but still he believes, as do physicians, that it merely led to the discovery of his ailment.

"I'll miss the boys, of course," said Mason ruefully yesterday. "Being a fireman, you know, gets in your blood."

Mason is a veteran of the World War. He was aboard the Coast Guard cutter Seneca as wireless operator when the collier Wellington was torpedoed in the Bay of Biscay in 1918. He volunteered with 19 members of the Seneca's crew to relieve the crew of the Wellington.

Shortly after he and his comrades had moved aboard, the Wellington sank. Only 8 of the 19 survived. Mason was rescued after hours in the water, but he is certain that had nothing to do with his heart ailment.

"It'll be the quiet life from now on," he sighed yesterday. "The doctors tell me I mayn't even fish."

New Cultural Relations Unit Set Up in U. S.

Dr. Cherrington Is Named Head of Division Created by Hull.

The United States took another step in furthering its good neighbor policy yesterday, when a Division of Cultural Relations in the State Department was created by Secretary Hull. Dr. Ben M. Cherrington was named head of the division.

Designed officially to promote better relations between the United States and all other countries, the agency is expected to have particular application to the task of increasing inter-American amity.

Secretary Hull's departmental order said:

"The new division will have general charge of official international activities of this department with respect to cultural relations, embracing the exchange of professors, teachers and students; co-operation in the field of music, art, literature and other intellectual and cultural attainments; the formulation and distribution of libraries of representative works of the United States and suitable translations thereof; the preparations for and management of the participation by this Government in international expositions in this field; supervision of participation by this Government in international radio broadcasts; encouragement of a closer relationship between unofficial organizations of this and of foreign governments engaged in cultural and intellectual activities, and, generally, the dissemination abroad of the representative intellectual and cultural works of the United States and the improvement and broadening of the scope of our cultural relations with other countries."

He added that it would direct fulfillment of this country's obligations under the Convention for Promotion of Inter-American Cultural Relations and co-operate with the National Committee on Inter-American Intellectual Co-operation, various Government departments and foreign missions.

The division will function under the general supervision of Under Secretary Welles, who, in a radio talk last night, pointed out that the foreign offices of the principal governments of the world have similar divisions.

"Whereas some of these governments have most elaborate establishments with large appropriations, for propaganda purposes," he remarked, "the one which we are now setting up will have a staff of eight persons including clerical personnel. Congress appropriated $27,920 to pay their total annual salaries . . . It is obvious that this is not a propaganda agency. We have no reason to undertake any form of propaganda with our friends and neighbors in the Western Hemisphere. We will, of course, look to the educational institutions and other private organizations interested in international cultural activities to co-operate with us in carrying the financial burden, the fruits of which I am confident will enrich the lives of our own people as well as our neighbors."

Dr. Cherrington for 12 years has been director of a program of public education in world affairs sponsored by the Foundation for the Advancement of the Social Sciences of the University of Denver, endowed by James H. Causey, formerly of Denver, now a resident of New York City.

Nazi Fliers to Ring World, Landing in Alaska and U. S.

The German round-the-world flight, for which Berlin has asked permission for landing in Alaska and the United States, will start in August or September, the German Embassy revealed yesterday.

The plane, an official said, will carry a crew of six, commanded by Capt. Henke, a pilot of long experience. Co-pilot will be Capt. Von Moreau. The remainder of the crew will be composed of a navigator, radio operator and mechanics.

The liner, a four-motored Condor manufactured by the Focke Wulf German Co., after leaving Germany will fly to India, China, Japan, Alaska and San Francisco. The plane's performance up to the time it reaches the United States will determine the itinerary during the rest of the trip. The official said, however, the aircraft probably would fly non-stop to New York and then try the Atlantic hop.

The Germans, not attempting to rival Howard Hughes globe-girdling venture, characterize their flight as a series of long-distance tests.

U.S. 'Owes' Living, Widow Says; Drys Impoverished Her

St. Louis, July 27 (AP).—An elderly widow who is seeking an old-age pension told an examiner for the Social Security Commission today the Government owes her a living "because everything was taken from us by prohibition."

The woman related she and her husband, a brewery worker, had saved a nice nest egg when he was thrown out of work by prohibition. "All during prohibition he did not work," she sobbed. "Then when beer came back he was too old to get a job. In 1933, when our savings were gone, he drowned himself."

Campaign Funds Unit Charges 'Scheming' in Tennessee

Parley to Draft State Model of Pay-Hour Law

Secretary Perkins to Call Conference to Aid Legislatures.

Secretary Perkins soon will call a conference of State labor executives to draft a model State wage-hour law to supplement the new Federal legislation.

A Labor Department official said yesterday about a dozen men would be invited to the meeting, probably late in August.

Any measure which they approve can be submitted to more than 40 legislatures meeting next January. Thus a few months after the Federal legislation becomes effective in October, many States may set up similar wage-hour standards for the millions of workers employed in intrastate industries not subject to the Federal law.

The conference method of working out a model law was recommended to Secretary Perkins after her return from Europe by V. A. Zimmer, chief of the division of labor standards.

Seeks Reasonable Uniformity.

Zimmer said he had received a dozen requests from State officials for information on standards which should be included in State laws.

Federal officials want to meet these requests with a model which will stand constitutionality tests and establish reasonably uniform wage and hour standards.

They also desire, it was said, to eliminate as rapidly as possible inequalities which may arise from competition under the Federal law. They cite in this regard a company operating in interstate commerce which must compete with a purely intra-State company. The latter, without a State law, would not have to maintain the same labor standards as the interstate concern.

Oklahoma, Pennsylvania Reversed.

So far only Oklahoma has enacted a measure approximating the Federal law, but it was held unconstitutional several months ago. The court indicated that had it been drawn differently it would have been upheld.

A Pennsylvania law setting up maximum hour standards for men suffered a similar fate but for different reasons. The court held that it delegated too much power to an administrator who could alter the specified 44-hour week maximum as he saw fit.

The Federal program will impose at the outset a maximum 44-hour work week and minimum 25-cent hour wages for all employes in interstate commerce.

Replacements Put C.C.C. At Full 300,000 Quota

Replacements during the first three weeks of July have brought the Civilian Conservation Corps to its full authorized enrollment of 300,000 men, plus about 11,500 Indians and residents of Territories, officials announced yesterday. The corps is operating 1,500 camps, and these will be maintained throughout the fiscal year.

'You Owe Me, Not I You,' Kreisler Tells Tax Men

Fritz Kreisler contended yesterday the income-tax people were wrong in asking him to come across with $224,980. As a matter of fact, the concert violinist, in requesting the Internal Revenue Commissioner to check again the figures for 1934-1936, claimed he already had paid $10,829 he didn't really owe.

Vote-Buying in Tennessee Is Charged by Senate Inquiry

moved "probably" because he supported George.

Directed an investigator to study alleged misuse of Federal road funds in the Illinois Senatorial contest, and assertions that WPA supervisors in Owen County, Indiana, were intimidated for political purposes.

The committee's statement on Tennessee said:

"The information the committee has received from its investigator in Tennessee has led it to send additional investigators at once into that State. The committee is of the opinion that if the evidence already before it with respect to assessments of Federal employes by one group participating in the Democratic primary contest for United States Senator and of State employes by the other group points sharply toward an election contest in the United States Senate regardless of which group's candidate triumphs.

"Apparently every scheme and questionable device that can be used in a political contest to raise funds to influence votes and control the election result is in full swing. Regardless of action that may be taken in the courts to punish those practicing illegal election methods and those exercising political pressure, there are indications that the Senate may be called upon to consider the probability of excessive money being used in behalf of the victorious candidates."

It said that although airmail charges sent by James W. Mellen, anti-New Deal Senate candidate, against McAdoo in California had not been received, "on the strength of the telegrams forecasting what the charges are, an investigation is sure to be made."

Chan Gurney, Yankton, S. Dak., Republican Senate candidate, called the committee's attention to franked press letter which he said was sent out by the Farm Security Administration of the Department of Agriculture on behalf of Gov. Berry.

Senator Sheppard revealed he had immediately written to Postmaster General Farley asking an investigation. He said the letter, calling attention to work that had been done by Berry in 1936, "while pretending to be information with respect to the FSA, is in reality a political circular."

Veiled Effort.

"We call your attention," he added, "to the fact that facts referred to in this circular took place approximately two years ago, namely, 1936, but the Department of Agriculture did not circularize these facts until the person named in the circular had become the nominee of one of the political parties on July 5, 1938.

"These franked letters contain what your committee believes is a veiled if not a direct effort to influence votes in behalf of a candidate for public office in South Dakota."

He told Farley he expected "that you will have an investigation made of the use of the frank privilege by a department of the Government for what appears to be a political purpose," and asked "what action you propose to take, if you agree with our views, to prevent repetitions of the misuse of the frank in such cases in the future."

The Missouri charges passed over by the committee consisted of newspaper clippings in which Joseph T. Davis, candidate against Senator Clark, charged Clark was assessing and collecting campaign funds from the personnel of the HOLC and FHA, as well as from employes of the Federal district attorney in Missouri.

Of the Hopkins' statement that at least 90 per cent of WPA workers would "vote for Mr. Roosevelt without being told," the committee said:

"His statement regarding his belief as to what proportion of relief would vote for Mr. Roosevelt was in response to a direct question at a press conference and was in no way a coercion of or dictation to workers connected with relief. Such statements are to be distinguished from those that are in the nature of political advice to or that indicate an intention to exert political pressure upon workers paid from relief funds or from beneficiaries of relief funds."

During the day the committee received from Gov. Chandler, seeking Barkley's seat, frank admission that "political considerations, as well as qualifications, of appointees" have influenced appointments to jobs in his State administration. He said in his reply to the committee questionnaire that, except for technical jobs, State department heads, "with my consent and approval, have undertaken to exercise care to select and appoint friends of mine and of my administration."

Ralph Burton, committee investigator in the Kentucky fight, reported at yesterday's meeting on charges of intimidation of WPA workers, but was instructed to go, also, into allegtaions that Chandler forces have been using the State's old-age pension payments in the interests of his candidacy.

L. K. Smith to Head U.S. Crop Insurance

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation's board of directors announced today resignation of Roy M. Green as manager of the corporation, to become general agent for the Farm Credit Administration's Ninth district.

The board said Leroy K. Smith, a Nebraska wheat farmer and chief of the corporation's operating section, would replace Green as acting manager until it made a permanent appointment.

Smith, a native of Macedonia, Iowa, and resident of Chase County, Nebr., since 1920, came to Washington last April to aid in coordinating field activities of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration with those of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation.

He was appointed chairman of the Nebraska State Grain Board in 1935 and served on the Nebraska State Agricultural Conservation Committee from 1936 until he came to Washington.

N. Y. Registration Trip.

The Democratic Absentee Voters' Bureau announced yesterday a registration trip to New York on August 5 for voters to register for the primary on September 20. Voters must register and vote in person for the primary but may vote by mail in the general election.

MartinCharged With Linking Lewis to 'Reds'

Auto Union Chief Denies Accusation at Trial of Ousted Aides.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 27.—John L. Lewis' name was brought into the trial of four suspended vice presidents of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers today and a defense attorney promptly charged Homer Martin, U. A. W. president, was trying to link Lewis with what Martin has termed a Communist conspiracy to wreck the union.

Martin emphatically denied the assertion, made by Maurice Sugar, and said it indicated Sugar's "persistent attempt to misrepresent the facts."

Sugar said the first witness at the trial, F. J. Michel, U. A. W. executive board member from Racine, Wis., told of a board meeting at Washington in April, 1937, at which Lewis requested permission to name an administrator for the union.

Confirms Lewis Request.

Martin confirmed this but said Lewis' request was made on representations from the officers now under suspension, and "when he learned the true situation he dropped the suggestion."

Sugar charged Michael's testimony indicated the Martin group "contends that Lewis was one of the 'conspirators' aligned with the defendants in delivering the international union to the Communist Party."

Larry S. Davidow, U. A. W. counsel, had charged the proposed appointment of an administrator resulted from an attempt by the "unity" faction in the executive board to seize control of the union.

Five Former Officers on Trial.

George Addes, ousted secretary-treasurer of the U. A. W. and Wyndham Mortimer and Ed Hall, suspended vice presidents now on trial, were members of the "unity" group. The others being tried on charges brought by Martin are Vice Presidents Richard T. Frankensteen and Walter Wells.

Charges Davidbw said would be proved against the suspended officers included:

That the "unity" group was "dominated by Communists," and that Robert Travis, U. A W. organizer in Flint, Mich., in 1937, was trying to get Communists into strategic posts to put the "unity" faction in control.

That Frankeinsteen invited Martin and a committee to meet with Communist Party leaders at Mortimer's home.

That the suspended officers plotted to seize control of the U. A. W. executive board at its June, 1938, meeting.

Faulty Propeller Caused Montana Crash, U. S. Finds

Improper adjustment of a propeller mechanism was cited yesterday as the cause of the crash of the Northwest Airlines transport plane at Billings, Mont., July 8, in which one passenger was killed.

The plane left the ground "in a stalled condition from which the pilot attempted to recover by use of full emergency power while within the boundaries of the airport," a Bureau of Air Commerce investigating board reported.

"Emergency power," the report continued, "was not available to the pilot because of improper adjustment to a stop which had been placed on the quadrant of the propeller pitch control levers, preventing the levers from going to the full low pitch position."

As a result the plane fell off on the right wing and crashed 1,100 feet beyond the runway, fatally injuring Mrs. N. S. Mackie, of Evanston, Ill. Seven other passengers and two crew members aboard were not seriously injured.

TVA Counsel Scores Morgan As 'Interferer'

Ousted Chairman's Action in Utility Suit Assailed at Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 27.—James Lawrence Fly, TVA general counsel, charged Dr. Arthur E. Morgan today with "unwarranted interference" in the 18-company power suit against the Government agency at Chattanooga last yinter.

The witness told a Congressional committee investigating the Tennessee Valley Authority that the ousted chairman's conduct in the case was "wholly unpredictable."

At one time, Fly said, Dr. Morgan challenged the "integrity" of defense counsel with accusations they had put TVA engineers "under pressure" for "misleading and misrepresentative evidence," the witness stated.

Engineers Embarrassed.

The case, in which private utilities attacked constitutionality of the Authority, is now pending before the Supreme Court.

Previously Dr. Morgan testified engineers were "embarrassed" by requests for evidence which he considered misleading, but which was not used in the trial.

He referred particularly to a report by E. L. Chandler, TVA costs estimate engineer, who was asked for separate estimates on two systems of single-purpose dams, one for flood control and one for navigation purposes.

Morgan contended this report tended to show, erroneously, that the cost of producing power was negligible as compared to flood control and navigation costs.

"No intelligent child could misunderstand it," Fly said of the Chandler report.

Former-Aide Backs Morgan.

TVA engineers earlier testified they were not subjected to pressure nor "embarrassed" by requests from the attorneys, explaining they prepared hypothetical figures on dam costs to controvert similar evidence prepared by the private utilities.

Carl A. Bock, chief consulting engineer for TVA and former assistant to Dr. Morgan, testified that in his opinion the Chandler report was "misleading" and that engineers had been put "under pressure" by attorneys.

"My opinion is," said Bock, "some of the engineers were under some embarrassment."

Witnesses who said they were not "embarrassed" by the attorney's requests, or subjected to pressure, were Robert A. Monroe, water control engineer, George W. Foster and Dana Wood, hydraulic engineers.

Dallas, Tex., July 27 (AP).—The Texas election bureau today said complete returns from the Third Congressional District showed Representative Morgan Sanders, veteran member of the House, had been unseated.

Twenty-five-year-old Lindley Beckworth, advocate of old-age pension increase and staunch admirer of President Roosevelt, and Brady Gentry, Smith County judge, will meet in the run-off August 17. Final totals were: Beckworth 14,096; Gentry 13,439, and Sanders 13,242.

886,950 HAIRS TO GROW
Between the Ages of 20 and 50

ALL of the hair which is on your scalp today will fall out and will be replaced by new hair within the next four years. This normal "hair cycle" continues as long as your scalp is healthy. Baldness comes when some local scalp disorder (such as dandruff) keeps the hair-growing structure from replacing the hair which reaches maturity and falls out. To avoid baldness you must help your scalp to re-grow 81 hairs each day—886,950 during the "danger age"—20 to 50.
The Thomas' can help you by overcoming any and all of the 14 local scalp disorders which may be leading you to baldness. When you start Thomas treatment, your dandruff disappears, abnormal hair-loss stops, and new hair starts to grow on the thin and bald spots. You need a good head of hair—and you can have it! Taxicab Driver District's 51st Auto Fatality

City Opens Playground Survey in Childrens' Traffic Deaths.

City officials yesterday started surveys to determine advisability of opening additional playgrounds to keep children off the streets, as Sam Bernstein, taxicab driver, became the fifty-first traffic victim of the year. Last year at this time there were 62 deaths.

Bernstein was struck as he was crossing at the 2000 block of Fourteenth street northwest. Police said he was struck by a taxicab driven by Ralph R. Winslow, 26, of Arlington. Winslow was released in custody of his attorney for coroner's action. Bernstein lived at 2129 Eighteenth street northwest.

Aid of the District PWA was offered for supervising additional playgrounds. Ross Haworth, assistant to Commissioner George E. Allen, who is also WPA administrator, said that the office would co-operate with school and playground officials "to the limit of our resources."

Investigate Child Deaths.

The surveys were started yesterday after Dr. Chester W. Holmes, acting superintendent of schools, conferred with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police. Dr. Holmes asked for a study of the six child deaths since June 1 to learn if they could have been prevented by additional play space for children.

Holmes said that the Community Center supervised 5 playgrounds and the Playground Department operated 50. Problem of the surveys, to be conducted also by the two agencies, is to determine if opening of any of the 84 playgrounds now closed would help prevent accidents by keeping children off the streets.

The surveys also will include findings on whether existing playgrounds satisfy needs of areas surrounding them and whether children must cross heavily traveled streets to reach them.

Limited Appropriations.

School, park, playground officials will meet today with Lewis R. Barrett, coordinator of the District recreation, to consider the problem.

Chief obstacle to opening additional playgrounds is lack of funds for supervisors. All agencies operating playgrounds now are straining limited appropriations to maintain supervision at grounds now open.

Police continued a campaign to keep children from playing in the streets warning parents of children found in the streets to have children go to playgrounds.

Meanwhile, correspondence of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer made public yesterday revealed that he upholds position of the Federal Government in the case of a Civil Conservation Corps worker arrested here for driving a Government owned truck, assigned in in Maryland, without an operator's permit.

Case Under Advisement.

The case has been taken under advisement until August 15 by Judge Hobart Newman in Traffic Court. George Oberholtzer, on duty at Garrett Park, is the CCC worker arrested. Van Duzer's letter, sent to Judge Newman by Louis Frick, of the National Capitol Parks office, said:

"If Virginia or Maryland or any other State does not require operators' permits for Federal owned vehicles, the District would not require those operators to have District operators' permits."

Mother Holds Failure in Love Motive of Strange Death Leap

Mrs. Warde Suggests Son Frustrated in Marriage Hope; N. Y. Police Fear Wave of Incidents as Girl Imitator Is Rescued From Ledge.

By the United Press.

New York, July 27.—The mother of John W. Warde today supplied a possible motive for his strange death leap after 11 hours of indecision on a seventeenth floor ledge of the Hotel Gotham.

Friends quoted the mother as saying: "He had a passionate fondness for a woman he could never hope to marry."

There was only vague speculation about the reason for his selection of such a spectacular means to suicide. The most prevalent theory was that his manic depressive tendencies were complicated by exhibitionism, that he achieved a sense of importance in being the center of New York's horrified attention for a few hours.

With a similar attempt at suicide today by Betty Vorunion, 24, of Irvington, N. J., police feared a possible wave of such freakish incidents. Miss Vorunion was found by office workers perched on a building ledge a mile from the spot where Warde leaped. They telephoned police, who rescued her without difficulty.

Funeral arrangements were announced at Warde's home in Southampton, Long Island. After private services at a funeral home in Brooklyn burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery, Brooklyn.

Patrolman Charles V. Glasco, who for eight hours tried to persuade Warde to leave the ledge, described his efforts today.

"He made me about seven partial promises not to jump," Glasco said. "He kept saying, 'Give me time. I have to work it out.'

"He seemed rational. He never mentioned his mother or his family, except to say, 'I want to talk to my sister.'

"I called her on the phone and then handed him the phone. I thought if I could get close enough to him I might be able to get hold of him. Handing him the phone was as close as I could get."

Glasco said that at one time he proposed Warde leave the ledge with the understanding that he would be permitted to go out again.

"He seemed interested. His fingernails were bitten to the quick. I suggested he come in and wash his hands and clean up and then go back out. But he wouldn't do it."

Warde described the crowd watching him as "morons," Glasco said.

"I had an idea that I'd get him filled up with coffee and water—enough to get him to go to the bathroom. It didn't work.

"I was certainly disappointed when he finally jumped."

'Numbers' Raid Is Made Close to Police Station

Practically in the shadow of their headquarters, police yesterday raided an alleged "numbers" establishment in the 600 block of D street northwest.

Armed with a warrant from United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, the raiders, under supervision of Sergt. George Deyoe, vice squad, seized seven men in a poolroom, charged two with operating a lottery and released the others.

The men who were charged gave their names as Robert G. Shaw, colored, 50, 200 block of D street northwest, and Herman J. Robinson, colored, 38, 1400 block of New Jersey avenue northwest. They were held under $1,500 bail.

Sergt. Deyoe said several plays had been made prior to the raid and a quantity of "numbers" and race-horse slips seized.

Radium Poison Sufferer Weighs 60 Lbs. at Death

Ottawa, Ill., July 27 (U.P.).—Radium poisoning she contracted 16 years ago snuffed out the last spark of life in the shrunken body of Mrs. Catherine Donohue today, but her fight for compensation will be carried on by the other "doomed women of Ottawa."

She was the tenth to die.

Death came to the 35-year-old mother of two children before she could collect any of the $6,700 in medical expenses and awards which the Illinois Industrial Commission had ordered the Radium Dial Co. to pay her.

Mrs. Donohue testified that she weighed 120 pounds when she started working for the company in 1921. When death came her body had withered to 60 ppunds.

Illness Climaxed in Landis Case Forces Blood Donor to Retire

Fire Sergt. M. C. Mason, Who Made Futile Effort to Save Murder Victim, Will Live Quietly in Florida; Suffers From Heart Condition.

A quiet spot in the shade of palm trees in a little Florida East Coast village with breezes from the ocean creeping in.

That is the life to which Fire Sergt. M. C. Mason, who gave his blood in a transfusion in a futile effort to save the life of Mrs. Blanche Gertrude Landis, will retire. Mrs. Mrs. Landis, beaten by her husband, one-time rookie fireman James L. Landis, lay dying at Casualty Hospital when physicians found Mason's type of blood matched hers.

Mason volunteered, but Mrs. Ladis died shortly afterward. Her husband is doing a life term for second degree murder.

Two days after the operation Mason became ill, although he has been on duty most of the time since then. August 1, however, he will be retired because of disability—a heart condition.

So, two weeks after his retirement becomes official, he will move to the village of Dania, Fla., with his wife and their 14-year-old daughter, Jacqueline. The three of them will live on his retirement pay of $108 a month.

The transfusion, which brought to a climax the fire sergeant's heart disease, was the fourth he has given in his life. It was the first time he had ever had any ill effects, but still he believes, as do physicians, that it merely led to the discovery of his ailment.

"I'll miss the boys, of course," said Mason ruefully yesterday. "Being a fireman, you know, gets in your blood."

Mason is a veteran of the World War. He was aboard the Coast Guard cutter Seneca as wireless operator when the collier Wellington was torpedoed in the Bay of Biscay in 1918. He volunteered with 19 members of the Seneca's crew to relieve the crew of the Wellington.

Shortly after he and his comrades had moved aboard, the Wellington sank. Only 8 of the 19 survived. Mason was rescued after hours in the water, but he is certain that had nothing to do with his heart ailment.

"It'll be the quiet life from now on," he sighed yesterday. "The doctors tell me I mayn't even fish."

Henlien Backed by Nazis' Cry of 'Swindle' on Minority Law.

By the United Press.

Prague, July 27.—The Sudeten German Party of Konrad Henlein, supported by angry German accusations of a "swindle," tonight officially rejected the government's draft of a proposed minority reform statute, published 24 hours ago after weeks of preparatoin.

The Sudeten Deutsche Pressebriefe, Henlein's party organ, distributed among the German minority of 3,500,000, rejected the government's offers on the grounds that they did not even approach satisfaction of the Sudeten autonomy demands.

Premier Milan Hodza and the government also were criticized for permitting publication of such an "insufficient answer" only a day after announcement that Viscount Runciman, former president of the British Board of Trade, will come to Prague as mediator and adviser in the Sudeten-Czech minority dispute that still holds a smoldering threat of hostilities.

Nazis Hail 'Victory.'

The government's minority statute, approved late Tuesday by the inner political committee of the cabinet, was offered by Hodza as the basis of next week's scheduled negotiations with Henlein in the presence of Lord Runciman.

The Sudeten Germans hailed the selection of Viscount Runciman as a victory for their demands, arguing that it constituted an admission that the government had made insufficient concessions to the minorities of Czechoslovakia and that his participation would force the cabinet to go far beyond the concessions contained in its statute draft.

Ernst Kundt, Sudeten Deputy in Parliament, called today on British Minister Basil Cochrane-Newton and tendered Henlein's full consent to Lord Runciman's role as mediator.

Reich Press Scores Plan.

Berlin, July 27 (AP).—The Nazi-inspired press today unanimously condemned the Czechoslovak government's newest minorities-soothing plan as an evasion of the autonomy demands of Sudeten Germans.

Headlines said:

"Scandalous disregard of German demands."

"Praha already begins sabotaging Britist efforts."

The principal German complaint was that the statute regarded and treated the Sudeten Germans as a minority instead of as "Staatsvolk"—a people with rights and status equal to those of the dominant Czechs and Slovaks, who far outnumber the republic's Germans, Poles, Hungarians and other racial groups.

Hodza's minorities statute, which would grant concessions in school administration, government jobs and the use of languages, was announced last night only a few hours after the British government appointed Viscount Runciman as unofficial mediator in the Czechoslovak-German dispute.

Czechoslovak acceptance of the appointment was seen as a triumph for Germans, who regarded Prague as yielding a degree of sovereignty.

Roof Is Removed, Chimney Too, but Wife Gets Honey

Kent, N. Y., July 27 (AP).—For weeks Mrs. Gerald Covell noticed a faint buzzing sound. Then she discovered the liquid oozing through the bedroom ceiling was honey.

The Covell's house no longer has bees in the attic, but the Covells had to take part of the roof off and move a chimney to get rid of them.

However, the Covells are having honey for supper.

Roosevelt Party Sends Supplies To Tiny, Tragic Charles Island

President Views Mystery-Laden Land From Deck, Donates Food, Medicines to Little Colony of 7 White Persons in 'Empire' of Missing Baroness.

Aboard U. S. S. Houston, In Galapagos Archipelago, July 27 (AP).—President Roosevelt, viewing tragic, mysterious Charles Island from the cruiser Houston, today sent precious fresh food and other gifts to the few inhabitants.

From Postoffice Bay, Charles Island's "waterfront," the President's naval aide, Commander Daniel J. Callaghan, members of the Presidential party, and about 50 bluejacket volunteers, went ashore with foodstuffs, magazines, newspapers and medical supplies.

The party struggled up steep mountain slopes to the crude home of Heinz Wittmer, his wife and their family of three.

Ashore they also found Elmir A. Conway and his wife, who left California 13 months ago and for 10 months had been struggling to exist on Charles Island. So another boatload of supplies was sent for them. Gifts also were sent to the five Ecuadorean Indians who, with the Wittmers and the Conways, make up the island's population.

The inhabitants refused comment about the mysterious disappearance from the island several years ago of the eccentric Baroness Eloise Wehrborn, whose invariable costume was a pair of silk panties and a pearl-handled revolver.

The baroness allegedly set up an "empire" and ruled her "subjects," three men, with an iron hand. Two of them later were found dead on nearby Marchena Island. They had died of thirst and starvation. Still later the baroness and her remaining "subject," Robert Philipson, disappeared unaccountably.

The President spent the day in his floating office and on the decks. Among Government messages received was a report of WPA Administrator Hopkins that during the week ended July 23 more than 37,000 workers had been added to the rolls of that agency.

"WPA rolls," Hopkins reported, "have shown a rise of more than 240,000 since June 1, this increase being distributed among 37 States and the District of Columbia."

The Houston turned eastward at 3 p. m. (E.S.T.) for Hood Island, 60 miles away, where the wild Wahoo, most savage of all fish in the Pacific, may get a chance to strike the Presidential hook.

Japan Enters 11th Province Of China's 24

Chiang Forces Announce 'Strategic Withdrawal' From Kiukiang.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, (Thursday), July 28.—The Chinese-Japanese war today rolled into Hupeh Province—the eleventh of the 24 Chinese provinces to be afflicted by land combat in a struggle just one year and three weeks old.

The Chinese, admitting "a strategic withdrawal" from Kiukiang, gateway to Hupeh and the metropolitan Wuhan area centering on Hankow, dug in on a new defense line 20 miles up the Yangtze River and just ahead of the Japanese offensive.

The new defense line runs south from Lungping, on the north bank of the river, to Teian, 30 miles south of Kiukiang, on the railway to Nanchang, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's greatest air base. Kiukiang fell Tuesday.

Chinese officials reported that cholera had broken out among refugees from Kiukiang and among the Chinese forces. Thirty-nine foreigners, including nine Americans, remained at Kiukiang or aboard the American and British gunboats Monocacy and Cockchafer and the British steamer Wenchow.

Advancing upriver against the Lungping-Teian line, intent upon smashing it and shoving 10 miles farther westward to Tiena-Kiachen and Wusueh, site of a submerged river boom, the Japanese carried their invasion into eastern Hupeh, part of a province of 71,000 square miles and 29,000,000 population.

The war now has swept 400,000 square miles of the 2,903,475 of China proper and has affected 250,000,000 persons of its estimated 450,000,000 population—either by land combat or by the operations of warships and warplanes.

The Japanese were expected to bomb Chinese positions between the Yangtze Valley forces and their next major objectives—Hankow and the other two Wuhan cities, Wuchang and Hanyang, and Nanchang, 90 miles south of Kiukiang.

The capture of Kiukiang, 135 miles downriver from Hankow, Generalissimo Chiang's general headquarters, increased the effectiveness of Japanese aviation. Hankow is only 100 air miles from Kiukiang.

By closing the mouth of Lake Poyang, 10 miles east of Kiuiang, the Japanese bottled up a few small Chinese warships and gained an excellent seaplane base.

Japanese spokesmen said American and British oil establishments suffered greatly from Japanese shelling "because the Chinese had converted the properties into fortified positions from which they had to be expelled."

Embassies at Hankow, following the lead of the Chinese foreign ministry, were preparing to leave for Chungking, 500 air miles further up the Yanktze valley.

The Chinese foreign ministry closed yesterday pending removal to Chungking.

Boom of Sunken Ships on Yangtze Halts Japanese

Innumerable Chinese boats were sunk in this spot on the Yangtze River, just below Kiukiang, in an effort to stop Japanese gunboats from proceeding upstream to the Chinese provisional capital at Hankow. This picture was made from the deck of a Japanese gunboat, temporarily halted by the "boom." Silhouetted in upper left is the barrel of an antiaircraft gun. Note masts of sunken ships.

Soviet Purges 'Japan's Spies,' In Far East

Stalin Orders Cleanup in Area of Manchukuo Border Disputes.

By the United Press.

Moscow, July 27.—Soviet Russia is carrying out a "merciless purge" of Japanese spies and Trotskyist conspirators in the Vladivostok region of the Far East, near the storm center of the Manchukuoan border disputes with Japan, it was reported tonight in dispatches reaching Moscow.

The purge, involving the Vladivostok maritime province of Far Eastern Siberia and the Red army and naval forces stationed in the strategic area, was said to have started several weeks ago under personal orders from Dictator Josef V. Stalin.

The tracking down of the "enemies and spies" is being continued "unswervingly," according to newspaper Pacific Ocean Star of Khabarovsk.

Disclosure of the newest of Stalin's purges of his "enemies" came in connection with a report of the third maritime party conference which, after recounting the achievements of socialist construction in the Far East, said:

"The Japanese invaders do not give up easily. They swarm like hungry wolves near our frontiers, greedily looking at the rich Soviet maritime region and happy life in the Soviet Far East.

"They are ready to throw themselves at any moment on the territory of the socialist motherland and only the power of the Bolshevist Party, which has organized strong defenses in the maritime region, harnesses them."

Halifax Warns Japan Britain Stays in China

Considers 'Possible Action' if Rights Aren't Respected, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 27.—Britain's foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax, warned Japan tonight that Britain intends to protect her century-old interests in China.

Addressing the House of Lords in a broad survey of troublesome problems facing the government, Lord Halifax used much blunter language about Japan than Prime Minister Chamberlain did in Commons yesterday.

He said Britain was considering "possible action" if Japan failed to respect British interests in China.

"We are quite ready," Lord Halifax said, "to consider and already are considering possible action open to us if we do not secure adequate consideration for interests we have a right to protect."

The foreign secretary appealed for international sincerity on other scattered fronts endangering world peace—particularly in the case of Czechoslovakia.

"That Way Lies Madness."

Quite frankly he admitted the Czechcoslovak problem was going to take a "genius" to solve.

Lord Halifax dedicated Britain to work for removal of the "nightmare of fear" hanging over Europe, and he decried as "stupid and useless the arbitrament of war."

"That way lies madness," he added.

Lord Halfax mentioned the strong bonds uniting Britain and France, and had a word also to say about Italian friendship agreement of in putting into effect the Anglo-Italian friendship agreemento f April 16 which depends upon a "settlement" of the Spanish war.

"I see no reason why such delay as is inevitable should mar the understanding which it was the principal purpose of the agreement to restore," he said.

Regrets Franco-Italian Enmity.

The foreign secretary regretted the failure of the Anglo-Italian agreement to produce improved relations between Italy and France, which he said were a necessary complement.

He denied Britain's pact with Italy was an attempt to weaken the Rome-Berlin axis.

"Quite bluntly," he said, "a policy based on the hope of driving a wedge between Berlin and Rome would be as futile as an attempt to divide Paris and London."

Paris, July 27 (AP).—France served warning tonight that dispatch of Viscount Runciman, former president of the British Board of Trade, as a mediator to Prague in no wise altered her determination to fight for her Czechslovak ally.

Hazen praised their work and the public spirited manner in which they aided their race, regardless of denomination.

Yesterday morning was featured by the presentation of a gavel to the national president, William H. Davis, of Washington.

Admitted 'Little Steel' Spy Tells Senators He Was Union Official

reason. The real reason was that I wasn't communistic enough."

Earlier Charles M. White, vice president of Republic, said it never had been the policy of the company to use espionage to get information regarding the formation of unions, but it had been used to get evidence of sabotage and other things.

Seated beside the slender but muscular Vargo was Charles Fagan, an excitable little man with a thick Scotch dialect. Now president of the union, he testified he was still out on strike. He and Vargo engaged in many quarrels, Fagan sputtering in protest at some testimony given by the other, or Vargo denying Fagan's testimony.

Vargo, who said he held "quite numerous strike breaking jobs," testified during a strike the company used him to mingle with the men on the picket lines for the purpose of picking up information. He said he was given an automatic pistol by Capt. Earl Butler, of the Republic police.

Says Police Attacked Him.

The union men smiled for the first time when further testimony revealed that this weapon was the instrument of getting Vargo arrested and "slapped around" by the Youngstown police. But the cuffing he got was, according to the testimony, mild compared to that given Edward J. Velesky, a union man, who was among others arrested at the same time.

No sooner had they gotten into the station house, Velesky testified, than he and others were attacked by police. Then they were booked.

"They took me down to the basement," he said, "and I thought it was all over, but I was struck from behind again. When I got to my hands and knees I was struck again and this time I went out. When I came to there were 10 or 12 officers in there kicking me around with their feet."

"They got slapped around," Vargo put in, "because they were pretty abusive and talked out of turn."

During the strike, the testimony ran, Vargo operated on an expense account from Republic. He couldn't recall how much he received, but he testified that he got "all he could" and "ate well and drank well."

His pro-company activities exposed, Vargo said he told Butler he wanted to leave town because he feared he might be shot.

"I've been on a lot of strike jobs in my life but I've never seen so much artillery among the union ranks as there was in Youngstown," Vargo testified. He said Butler told him to report to Capt. Todd, of Republic's police, in Buffalo, N. Y.

Tells of Suspicions.

Fagan and John Steuben, C. I. O. organizer, told the committee one of the things that made them suspicious of Vargo was that he frequently left his job in the mill to engage in union activities and never was penalized for it.

"I was put out for it," said Fagan.

Vargo turned to him and denied he had left his job to "spy on their meetings."

"I was put out the same as you," he asserted.

"I didn't know that," Fagan said.

"Well, you know it now and you knew it then," snapped Vargo.

Chairman La Follette of the committee introduced an affidavit purporting to show that at least one union member had been discharged as a result of an exchange of labor espionage information between steel companies.

His action followed testimony by James L. Williams, police chief for Republic Steel Corporation, on circulation among the corporation plants of a list of eight Republic workers who were members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

Williams said the list came from the Otis Steel Corporation. One of those named, Manuel Garcia, of Cleveland, signed the affidavit which La Follette introduced into evidence. Garcia swore he was discharged for union activity on August 30, 1936, a few weeks after the list was distributed.

T. F. Patton chief counsel for Republic, asserted that testimony before the National Labor Relations Board disputed the claims of some of the workers who said they had been fired for union activity. He called attention to the fact that final Labor Board findings had not yet been made.

Praises Espionage.

In addition to working with Otis Steel, Williams testified, he exchanged information with police officials of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Jones-Laughlin, Weirton, Ohio Seamless, Ohio Brass Co., and United States Steel.

White, Republic vice president, testified that labor espionage sometimes "is a good thing."

"It is the duty of all corporations to have a general knowledge of the conditions in their plants that do not appear on the surface," he said.

Williams testified Republic discontinued its labor spying "several months ago."

The system of employing undercover men was abandoned on his own initiative, largely because the labor act was upheld by the Supreme Court, Williams said.

Distillery to Test FTC Jurisdiction

Action challenging the jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission over any part of the liquor business was initiated yesterday by counsel for the Raritan Distilleries Corporation of Perth Amboy, N. J.

The test will be based on a complaint issued by the commission charging the company with unfair competition in interstate commerce.

The commission's complaint would prohibit the corporation from using the word "distilleries" in its corporate name on the ground that the use of the word "distilleries" would indicate that the company was engaged in distilling the beverages it sells, when such is not the case.

Smith-Dodd Primary Fight Gets Rougher

Dodd

a Communist with a capital C or a communist with a small c."

The Chronicle had said he was "well known among Communists."

Dodd also stated in his letter he was "a life-long Democrat, was born in Virginia, have lived here most of my life and have voted for Democratic candidates in the Eighth District." The Chronicle had said there was "no evidence Dodd, jr., has ever voted in Virginia."

Dodd repeated his denial of being a Communist to a gathering at Barcroft, Arlington County, last night, saying such charges were only "a cry from a sinking ship."

Speaking at the Barcroft Community Hall, with between 80 and 90 persons jammed inside and some 25 others standing on the steps, Dodd declared his age—he is only 32—made no difference in his ability to represent the people in Congress.

"I know what the people of this county want," he declared, "and I don't think Smith does."

Dodd announced he favors any possible aid from the Federal Government in order to provide municipally owned power plants for Arlington County or for other counties in the Eighth Congressional District, where such plants would benefit the public through offering lower power rates.

Today the energetic young candidate, son of the former American Ambassador to Germany, will travel to historic Charlottesville, southern end of the district.

Representative Smith, the 55-year-old incumbent, meantime is keeping quiet. His first major speech of the campaign will come tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock when he will talk for a half-hour over Station WJSV.

Dodd, who has tried unsuccessfully to engage Smith in debate, will follow the latter on the air, talking from the same station at 9:30 o'clock.

Robert N. Anderson, special assistant to Attorney General Homer Cummings and manager of Dodd's campaign for Congress, went on the air last night and charged Representative Smith had undertaken to "thwart the program and policies of the President." He charged, too, he had voted against the welfare of the farmer, the war veteran and the industrial workers. Referring to Smith's "reactionary activity," he accused him of joining with Republican members of the House Rules Committee to block a vote on the wages and hours bill.

"He has turned his back on the Democratic Party," Anderson continued. "No man or no woman, knowing the issue, can consistently support President Roosevelt and at the same time vote for Judge Smith. A vote for Dodd is a vote for the President."

Discussing efforts to "hinder" Dodd's campaign, Anderson said:

"In some counties a hostile local press has refused to present both sides of the issue here involved. In one or two cities permission was refused to erect a street banner carrying the slogan, 'Support Roosevelt by voting for William E. Dodd for Congress.' In other instances posters bearing Bill Dodd's likeness have been stripped from trees and telephone poles. In one or two cities large license fees were demanded preliminary to the operation of our sound truck. But I am glad to say that these physical obstructions have not been erected by the farmer, the worker or the veteran."

The primary election will be held Tuesday.

grand jury inquiry, and former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, who first fired the charges, to divulge their material and make it public.

Often during the day the program incited blasts of criticism from the Republican minority delegations.

One of the spokesmen, Representative E. Kent Kane, proposed an amendment to prohibit the Attorney General from superseding in investigations which involve the Governor who appointed him.

Attorney General Guy K. Bard failed in an attempt to supersede Shelley in the grand jury inquiry scheduled to begin August 8.

Kane's amendment precipitated the first vote test on the inquiry program. It was defeated, 132 to 47, a straight party vote.

A Democratic amendment to supersede this measure, readily adopted, provided for the Attorney General's removal from a proceeding if, after a hearing, the presiding judge decided he was "unable to perform his duty impartially."

Kane's action preceded a Republican appeal to "the Democratic lawyers in the House that they "represent the people and not Gov. Earle and Senator Guffey."

Guffey Off for Europe.

The Legislature did not act on United States Senator Joseph F. Guffey's call for impeachment of unnamed Pennsylvania judges. The chairman of the House judiciary general committee said no action would be taken unless charges were brought before the House formally. The Senator made his attack last night in a statement handed newspapermen.

Guffey, in New York to sail for Europe, said he would ignore a subpena to testify in the projected grand jury investigation. He said he would pay a $100 penalty and sail for the International Parliamentary Union meeting at The Hague.

Loyalists Smash Into Gandesa at Bayonet Point

Spain

steel vise, closing upon it from north, south and east while his advance guard sped on past it and were reported tonight to be nearing Caseras and Batea, deep in insurgent-held Teruel Province.

The loyalists were able to drive beyond Gandesa, control point for Franco's lines of communication to his armies on the other side of his corridor to the sea, as result of their capture of Villalba de Los Arcos, 5 miles northwest of Gandesa, and the village of Bot southeast of the insurgent base.

While advance forces moved stealthily into the shell-blasted outskirts of Gandesa the main column under Gen. Rojo was only a mile behind, coming from the flood-swollen banks of the Ebro

Franco's general staff, unable to halt the sledge-hammer loyalist assault on land because of heavy drain on Gandesa garrison to bulwark its Valencia offensive, sent fleets of planes along the Ebro in an effort to break up the drive.

The loyalists crossed the river at 12 points, from Tortosa, where the river flows into the Mediterranean, north to Ribarroja.

The highway to the front provided sharp contrasts—loyalist troops, singing and laughing, moved into the fight. In the opposite direction, back to loyalist concentration camps, trudged hundreds of glum insurgent prisoners.

Within the rapidly expanding arc of the loyalist spearhead the loyalists "mopped up" their seizure of 15 towns and villages as well as the Fatarella Heights dominating Gandesa on the north. The strategic heights of San Miguel, Asco, Mora de Ebro and Miravet, dominating Franco's network of communications, also were stormed and taken by Rojo.

One of the highlights of the victory was the penetration of Aragon Province between Caspe and Gandesa and occupation of the Sierra de Mequinenza Heights and the slicing of the important Fraga-Maella road by cavalry and tanks.

If Franco hopes to re-conquer the ragged triangle of territory along the Ebro that has fallen to the loyalists in the last 72 hours he must establish at least five divisions on a 50-mile front and either weaken his drive on Sagunto or abandon his Estramadure offensive on the other side of Spain, frontier military observers said.

British Plan Accepted.

London, July 27 (U.P.).—The British plan to establish a neutral commission to investigate the bombing of civilians and "open cities" in Spain was given the "go ahead" signal today by the Spanish loyalist government. Gen. Franco announced his acceptance of the plan yesterday.

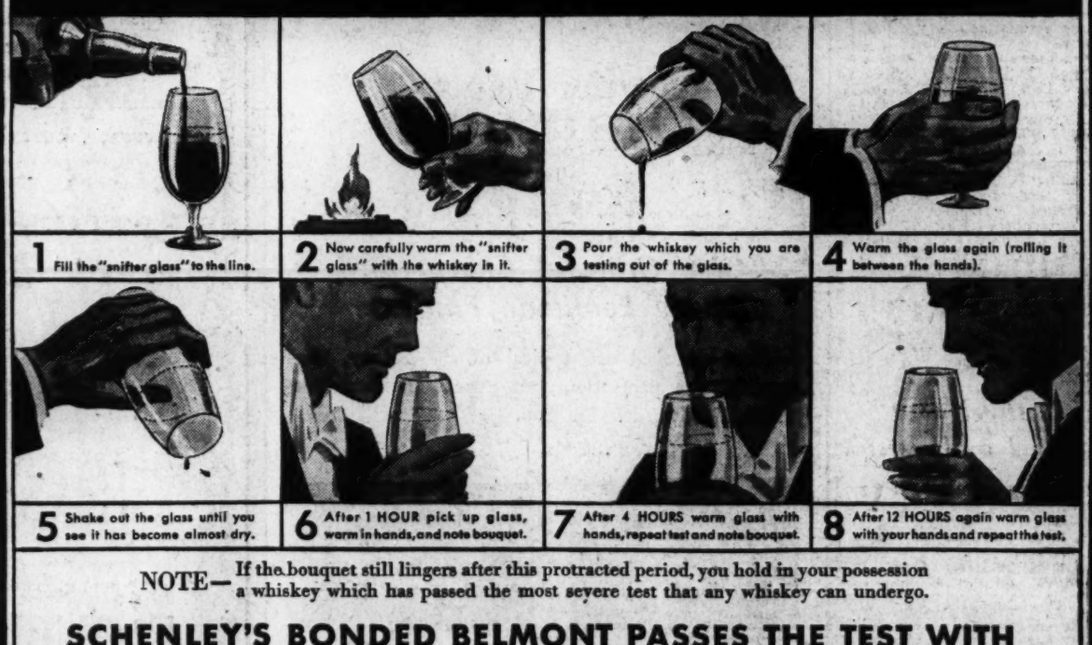
The Most Severe Test for FLAVOR in Whiskey!

MAKE THIS REVEALING TEST FOR BOUQUET, BODY, TASTE, AROMA, FLAVOR

USE A "SNIFTER GLASS", SOMETIMES CALLED A "NOSE GLASS"

A tulip-shaped, thin, clear glass — holding about 4 ounces if filled to the top — but which is provided with an etched line as a marker where to stop pouring. If you don't own one of these glasses use ordinary brandy snifter.



1 Fill the "snifter glass" to the line.
2 Now carefully warm the "snifter glass" with the whiskey in it.
3 Pour the whiskey which you are testing out of the glass.
4 Warm the glass again (rolling it between the hands).
5 Shake out the glass until you see it has become almost dry.
6 After 1 HOUR pick up glass, warm in hands, and note bouquet.
7 After 4 HOURS warm glass with hands, repeat test and note bouquet.
8 After 12 HOURS again warm glass with your hands and repeat the test.

NOTE— If the bouquet still lingers after this protracted period, you hold in your possession a whiskey which has passed the most severe test that any whiskey can undergo.

SCHENLEY'S BONDED BELMONT PASSES THE TEST WITH FLYING COLORS!

As you may well imagine, it takes a truly great whiskey to pass a test as severe as this. To our knowledge, there is one whiskey on the market today that can meet it ...Bonded Belmont. For Bonded Belmont is the real old-style Kentucky Bourbon of luxury unlimited...a Bourbon of body, bouquet and flavor deep as a diamond ...a veritable gold mine of good taste!

U. S. Bar Lays Class Hatred To Labor Act

Lawyers

railroad law since 1906 off the statutes books, in recognition that railroads no longer are natural monopolies and must be in a position to compete freely with rival methods of transportation.

Meanwhile, at another section of the convention of 5,000 lawyers here, Charles C. Burlingham, of New York City, urged adoption by the American Bar Association of a resolution condemning Nazi racial, religious and political discrimination, and praising President Roosevelt's efforts in behalf of world action to help refugees.

Craven blamed "labor pressure" for the abandonment of the railroad co-ordination act in 1936. As administered by Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman, Craven said the act would have eliminated much of the unnecessary duplication of facilities, cut-throat practices, and extravagances.

Sees Government Ownership.

Craven added "more bankruptcies are just around the corner and there will have to be Government ownership or subsidization because the Government has not taken the simple steps to put the house in order."

This failure, the attorney said, was political fear of labor which claimed 75,000 jobs would be lost in consolidations.

Kenneth F. Burgess, of Chicago, former solicitor for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad; Robert B. Tunstall, of Cleveland, general counsel for the Chesapeake & Ohio, and Frank Boesel, of Milwaukee, special master in the reorganization of the Chicago & Northwestern Road, all were in agreement that railroad reorganization could proceed under the machinery set up by section 77 of the national bankruptcy act.

Although more than 30 per cent of the carriers are now undergoing reorganization under the terms of the act, no reorganization of a road has actually been completed.

All agreed it was virtually impossible to set up a reorganization plan for a bankrupt road when the road was not even making operating expenses.

Something in the nature of a "fight talk" for the railroad lawyers came from Col. Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, Va., who is co-receiver of the Seaboard Airline Railway.

Streamline Courts Backed.

Among a number of committee reports adopted by delegates was the notable report of the special committee on judicial administration, containing 66 recommendations for specific reforms in procedure to "streamline" the State courts.

The report of the standing committee on Federal taxation, containing recommendations, also was adopted. It recommended, among other things, study directed toward elimination of some of the very complex legal difficulties that have arisen in estate cases.

The report of the special committee on judicial selection and tenure recommended a continued fight for appointed judges in most of the States where judges are elected.

The Right Honorable Lord MacMillan, lord of appeal in ordinary in London, one of seven members of England's highest court, addressed a dinner of the convention tonight on "Education for Law."

Delegates Elected.

Cleveland, July 27 (AP).—The assembly of the American Bar Association today elected five attorneys as delegates to the house of delegates, the association's administrative body.

They included George M. Morris, Washington, D. C.; William L. Ransom, New York; William E. Evans, Paterson, N. J., and Donald B. Hatmaker, Chicago.

Ronald J. Foulis, St. Louis, was installed as chairman of the junior bar conference today. Paul F. Hannah, Washington, D. C., became vice chairman, and Joseph Harrison, Newark, N. J., secretary.

Council members are Benedict M. Holden, jr., Hartford, Conn.; Lewis F. Powell, jr., Richmond, Va.; Peyton D. Bibb, Birmingham, Ala.; Earl F. Morris, Columbus, Ohio; James P. Economos, Chicago; H. Howard Cockrill, Little Rock, Ark.; Harold W. Schweitzer, Los Angeles; A. Pratt Kesler, Salt Lake City, and Charles E. Pledger, Washington, D. C.

Bird in the Hand Worth 2 in Bush; But Costs 60 Days

A bird in the hand may be worth two in the bush, but the one held by Charles H. Schlosser, 63, of no fixed address, cost him 60 days in jail.

According to Mrs. Edith McIntyre, 1302 Florida avenue northeast, Schlosser had what he called a mocking bird; he got it from the Zoo and would take 50 cents for it.

Mrs. McIntyre told Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran she didn't think the bird looked like a mocking bird and called the Animal Rescue League. She was told it probably was a robin.

She said she gave Schlosser a nickel for coffee and then called the police. Judge Curran gave Schlosser 60 days on a drunk charge.

Her Son One of Four Children Killed in Cave Collapse

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Edward Kruczek, 9, and five playmates yesterday dug a cave which collapsed on them. Edward's mother Mrs. Angela Kruczek, rushed to a hospital to find that Edward and three companions were dead, and a fifth was injured critically. The cave was in a 40-foot slope in Cleveland near where several "torso murder" victims were found. Mrs. Kruczek is shown being comforted by another son with an excited neighbor at their side.

Score of Chincoteague Fishermen Play Cowboy For 2 Days in Island's Annual Pony Round-up

Pony

they swam. Alongside swam the fishermen-cowboys on their ponies, herding them compactly, keeping them in an unwilling fraternity of fear and misery.

From Wallops Island big flat "monitors" loaded with ponies in temporary pens were towed by tug across Chincoteague inlet. These monitors are barges on which oysters are loaded and brought to market. As the fishermen adapt themselves to horse wrangling, so they have adapted their equipment.

Another monitor-load was towed across Chincoteague Bay from Pope's Island and a third from Green Run Island down a long canal into Chincoteague Bay. Put ashore, the ponies were given a few hours of rest and quiet and then were driven wildly through the town, down its main street and into the pens.

Spanish Origin Possible.

This business of selling wild ponies is an intricate one, full of legend and romance. The generally accepted version of the ponies' origin is that a few were marooned on the islands by the wreck of a Spanish ship centuries ago.

They'll tell you here, while they solemnly point out features of conformation that they say prove the ponies to be Spanish, that maybe a few Shetland ponies were put among them once to improve the strain. There's no proof of that, any more than there is of the shipwreck legend, but it does not affect the hardiness or the handiness of these little animals.

It seems the first ponies were sold about 1856 to buyers who discovered them without assistance from the islanders. Sales were held only occasionally until 15 years ago when Chincoteague had a disastrous fire, its second in a few years. Chincoteague decided it could no longer battle fire with buckets and a little handpumper which no one knew how to work.

So in 1924 a volunteer department was organized and the story is that the new members passed the hat and collected $4.21 toward equipment. With this $4.21, unlimited confidence, and extraordinary credit they bought a $15,000 fire engine.

$100,000 Earned.

With that pumper to pay for and a firehouse to be built, the brash young fire department organized a carnival and persuaded three men, Joe Pruitt, Clarence Beebe and Jim Powell, who owned the islands on which the ponies had roamed for centuries, to make the pony penning part of the carnival. Pruitt, Beebe and Powell receive the income from pony sales, the fire department furnishes rubber-footed sailor-capped cowboys to herd them to Chincoteague and back again and thousands of visitors come to see the penning and stay for the carnival.

In 14 years, according to E. L. Jones, chief of the department since its organization, the carnival with its splash of mislaid Western color has returned $100,000 to the fire boys. They have paid for their first engine, bought another and all but paid for a fine brick firehouse on the main street.

Approximately 150 ponies will be sold tomorrow, Jones estimated from past performances, and will bring from $25 to $80 each. Unbroken yearling colts will fetch $25 to $35; unbroken grown-ups will bring $65 to $70 and broken ponies $75 to $80. Some have been sold in advance.

200 Still at Large.

All in all, there are 600 or 650 ponies on the four islands. At each penning some must be left because of bellicose stallions or because they retreat into impenetrable marshland. The 450 the boys will have for sale tomorrow will represent the cream of the whole herd, they say, and will find a ready market. Among them are browns and blacks and greys and paints. These latter are a motley and piebald crew, spotted and streaked and probably the true Chincoteague pony.

Cowboys though they are for these two days, Chincoteague islanders still will be fishermen.

So tomorrow when the ponies are sold there will be no lariats flung over the tossing heads and flying manes. Instead, fishermen-firemen-cowboys will sneak up on a wanted pony with an oyster stake on which a loop has been made, snare him and trot him up for inspection.

Oyster stakes, oyster barges, fishing boats, rubber boots and seamen's caps somehow turn this island rodeo into something strange and wonderful. There is nothing else like it.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 2 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. Then poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

rate" and always invited applicants for a business loan "to come and see me" when interest charges were at issue.

For the new loan-grant scheme to be widely adaptable, informants said, RFC necessarily would have to reduce its usual rates. They have ranged above the 4 per cent charged by PWA, and currently most municipalities can obtain local financing at less than 4 per cent.

This usually applies, however, to local purchase of city corporate bonds for PWA projects. The RFC-PWA combination, authorities explained, was aimed principally at the purchase of revenue bonds which rested on the success of a PWA project and frequently were less attractive to private money.

The idea, spokesmen said, appealed to Jones, who controls one of the largest single accumulations of Federal funds. Jones, they said, made a point of lending in large lumps, while Ickes wanted to scatter PWA money into as many communities as possible. He has allotted $562,251,129 of his $950,000,000 appropriation for loans and grants. Seeing his resources dwindle, he anticipated a demand much greater than he could meet without assistance.

$500,000 Alloted For REA Plant

Determination to finance construction of power generating plants wherever such action is considered necessary to advance the Rural Electrification Administration's program of extending low-cost electric service to farm families on a co-operative basis, was disclosed yesterday by Administrator John M. Carmody.

He announced $500,000 had been set aside for the construction of such a plant or plants to serve rural distributing projects in Ohio.

The REA administrator's statement was made in connection with announcement of the making of 36 allotments for line construction and wiring loans in 19 States totaling $6,757,300.

Training School Given Own Zoo For 500 Children

The more than 500 children at the District Training School at Laurel, Md., were presented yesterday with a small and ready-made zoo.

The gift came from the National Zoological Park which, it seems, had a few specimens to spare. So yesterday a pair of raccoons, an opossum, some monkeys, foxes and wild fowl, were sent out to the Laurel institution, which cares for Washington's feeble-minded.

Dr. David E. Buckingham, District veterinarian, said last night that the gift will mean a great deal to the children in the institution.

It is expected that contributions from the National Biological Survey will be added to the collection of wild fowl. Dr. Buckingham asks that owners of pets—except dogs or cats—call him at his office in the Hospital for Animals, 2115 Fourteenth street northwest, if they no longer want them. His telephone number is North 1603.

Girl From Northeast Captures 'Miss Southeast' Beauty Prize

Betty Crown Acclaimed at Outing Contest; Will Seek City Title.

BETTY CROWN.

Miss Betty Crown, 18-year-old McKinley High School senior, was named "Miss Southeast" yesterday in a bathing beauty contest at the tenth annual outing of the Southeast Business Men's Association—but she lives in Northeast Washington.

Betty resides with her mother, Mrs. Maud Crown, and her uncle, Arthur J. Shaffer, at 9 Girard street northeast. But Shaffer is proprietor of a flower shop at 615 Pennsylvania avenue southast, so that makes everything alright.

"Miss Southeast" will compete for the "Miss Washington" title against entrants from other sections of the city in a contest sponsored by the Federation of Businessmen's Associations. The winner will be sent to the national contest in Atlantic City.

About 1,000 persons attended yesterday's outing at the Annapolis Roads Club, Annapolis. They took part in contests ranging from a 25-yard dash to a pie-eating competition. Two hundred and fifty prizes were raffled.

Shaffer was chairman of the entertainment committee—but he was not one of the judges of the beauty contest.

Kentuckian Says Farley Proposed Logan Court Deal

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., July 27.—State Finance Commissioner Dan Talbott in a statement tonight asserted Postmaster General James A. Farley last year had proposed giving a judicial appointment to Senator M. M. Logan, of Kentucky, to avoid the present senatorial race between Gov. A. B. Chandler and Senator Alben Barkley. Chandler then could have entered the Senate without opposing Barkley.

Farley asked him, Talbott said, if there was any way to avoid a Chandler-Barkley contest. "I said," he continued, . . . Logan wanted to get out of the Senate and be appointed a Federal judge."

He said Farley, the next day, phoned him not to let Chandler announce for the Senate, as "the Chief has three places he can give Logan."

When Chandler, last January, saw the President, Talbott said, no mention was made of a judgeship for Logan, but the next day papers carried a statement by Barkley "that we had . . . placed a gun at their heads and demanded an immoral deal involving the courts." Logan then declared he could not subscribe to a deal involving the courts."

"It is my opinion," Talbott said, "that James Farley was double-crossed.

work, had given him $300 on one occasion and $125 on another, but recently had changed his mind about a plan to make Smith his business partner when Giffin retires in March. Smith described this as "welching."

"That was what made me vindictive," he said, adding that he had stayed the three months in Giffin's home "to help him cut down on his drinking."

Lieut. Col. James M. Peale, defending Giffin, raised an eyebrow at this.

"Then your motives," he inquired softly, "were entirely those of a Christian gentleman endeavoring to put the colonel back on his feet?"

Smith hesitated, twisted in his chair, and replied:

"There seems to be some question about that."

The Rev. R. J. Stewart, Catholic chaplain, had his say when Smith was through. He said Smith's reputation is "bad."

"He was a deliberate liar," the priest testified, "and I would not believe him under oath."

The judge advocate asked if the priest had not once had a physical encounter with Smith. Father Stewart smiled and said, "Yes."

"Who won?"

"That's a foolish question to ask," was the reply. "I'm the one that's sitting here. You should have seen him when he was lying on the floor."

Lieut. Earl R. Davlitz, Protestant chaplain, testified he was "inclined to say Smith's reputation was bad."

The courtmartial is important because it may result in changing sections 95 and 96 of the Articles of War, covering the conduct of officers.

A Modern Faust.

John William Warde, unknown in life and doubtless destined to continue so, achieved by the manner of his death a publicity which kings might envy.

And he deserved it. For there were qualities about this suicide which raised it far above the merely melodramatic level. There were aspects of that all-day vigil, on the threshold of oblivion, which probe deeply into the mysteries of the human soul. "I want to be alone," said this undistinguished youth of 26, as he clung to his dizzy and inaccessible ledge. "I'll figure things out for myself."

Perhaps he did so. Perhaps, in the moment of that awful leap, the tangled skein of life came clear for him. Perhaps he saw why some succeed and others fail and understood what lies behind the mass of inconsequential detail with which most men obscure their vision of the ultimate.

Society has always looked askance upon the suicide. That supreme form of individualism is too rugged, too menacing to the established order, to encourage tolerance. And many suicides, certainly, are cowardly, irrational, exhibitionist, idiotic. But not all; not necessarily, it would seem, that of John William Warde.

It may have been as a flamboyant gesture that he crawled to the coping where, for over ten hours, he held so many thousands breathless. But having made the gesture, he followed through. He was "ashamed," Warde said, to retreat to safety while those below were watching. And in addition to pride this unhappy youth possessed a sense of humor. Somebody urged that he withdraw to see his favorite ball team—the Chicago Cubs—play Brooklyn. And he replied that he did not want to see a game with Brooklyn. The worthy Dodgers have never received a more devastating crack.

To face death with both pride and humor is to play the man, regardless of the cause, the circumstance or the condition of the mortal actor. It was thus that Faust, having made his compact with the devil, met the fulfillment of his bond. John William Warde, like his famous prototype, did not begrudge payment for the brief period of power granted him.

Acting instinctively, the press of the Nation gave columns to the ten hours of hectic notoriety for which this modern Faust exchanged the obscurity and frustration which were his lot. In giving this publicity, few editors realized that they were estimating dramatic possibilities with the eyes of Christopher Marlowe, of Lessing and of Goethe. But they were.

The Shakedown.

The "shakedown" of public employes is one of the oldest and most indefensible of political devices. It is based on the assumption that Government employes owe their jobs to the politicians who happen to be in office, and should therefore contribute a portion of their salaries to aid campaigns for the re-election of those officials. In short, this form of blackmail traces directly to the spoils system.

Reports that Federal employes are now being "shaken down" to aid candidates in various parts of the country are not surprising. In view of the vast number of jobs distributed as patronage during the last few years it would be more surprising if these employes were not called upon to help finance the political machines that rewarded them. When the spoils system runs riot the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee can scarcely be expected to prevent political assessments upon Government employes, despicable though the practice is.

Of course, the committee can expose officials who raid Government pay rolls to swell their campaign funds. That exposure may detract in some measure from the advantages won by a candidate through exploitation of public employes. But it is not likely to eliminate the evil. The "shakedown" will doubtless continue as long as the spoils system makes the Government service a happy hunting ground for politicians, and as long as political parties sanction this means of raising campaign funds.

Any general movement against coercive political levies upon Federal salaries ought to begin in Washington. The practice is carried on with finesse here. Levies come in the form of tickets for grand dinners at $50 or $100 per plate. But employes without civil service status do not ignore suggestions that they purchase these tickets; not if they value their jobs, at least.

The greatest service which the Senate committee could render in this connection would be so fully to expose the practice that the public would demand abolition of the conditions out of which it arises. No political party could afford to indulge in such tactics if they were condemned by an aroused public opinion. And if all employes were selected on the basis of merit, and protected by civil service rules, there would be much less opportunity for politicians to "muscle in" on the Federal pay roll.

Exports Hold Up.

"Although the aggregate output of our factories was approximately one-third smaller in the first six months of this year than in the corresponding period of 1937," says a current publication of the Department of Commerce, "the quantity of exports of manufactured goods was actually slightly larger."

Considering the depressed state of domestic business, the export trade has held up remarkably well. Indeed, the Department of Commerce points out that the statistics suggest the important extent to which exports have assisted in maintaining United States employment and purchasing power" in face of adverse conditions. The figures also emphasize the fact that in spite of our efforts to stimulate recovery, depression seized upon this country first and has been of exceptional severity here. While evidences of recession in other countries began to be reflected in production and trade indices nine or ten months ago, declines there have been extremely moderate compared with the sharp drop experienced in the United States.

This sustained industrial activity abroad, together with the demand growing out of rearmament programs, largely account for our satisfactory export trade in manufactured goods. The more pronounced increase in agricultural exports is due primarily to larger grain shipments made possible by abundant crops in 1937, following years of drought and shortages.

From the viewpoint of countries selling goods in the American market, however, the trade picture is far from bright. The shrinkage in both volume and value of all the main categories of imports has been of spectacular severity. The value of our agricultural imports, for example, fell by $424,000,000, or 47 per cent. Imports of crude raw material such as rubber, raw silk, wool, hides and skins, subtropical foodstuffs and other agricultural products were much lower. Imports of manufactured goods showed even more extreme declines in value, on the average, than imports of agricultural products. Quantitatively declines were likewise exceptionally large.

The net result is that in contrast to an excess of merchandise imports, for the first six months of 1937, we had an excess of exports amounting to $631,000,000 during the first half of 1938. This is the largest excess for any corresponding period since 1921. Those who feared that our export trade would be adversely affected by the reciprocal trade pacts will find less than no evidence to justify their anxiety in the latest trade figures. On the contrary, the statistics are more likely to create misgiving among the advocates of reciprocity.

One of the leading arguments in favor of the trade pacts has been that they would make possible increased outlets in the American market for foreign goods and thus provide foreigners with funds for the purchase of our exports. Since trade depends upon an exchange of goods we must, it is said, be willing to buy in order to sell. Yet, at the present time, the United States is selling much more than it purchases.

Of course the trade figures for any six months cannot safely be regarded as an indication of the long-time trend of our foreign trade. Already the broadening of the depression from an American to a world phenomenon has been reflected in a recent shrinkage of our exports. If normal, peaceful international intercourse is restored, conditions will doubtless alter radically. Meantime, we have benefited from a fortunate, ephemeral combination of circumstances which has provided much-needed export outlets for our depressed industries.

Somewhat Confusing.

Repeatedly complaints come from official quarters that steel companies have engaged in collusive bidding on Government contracts as evidenced by identical quotations on many products. A very different sort of complaint, however, is voiced by Phillip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, in testifying before the Public Contracts Board set up to enforce the minimum wage provisions and other requirements of the Walsh-Healey act. Mr. Murray protests that two of the independent steel concerns wax fat on Government contracts by depressing the wages of their labor and underbidding their competitors.

It is very confusing to be told first that the steel companies maintain prices by not competing, and then that they engage in competitive price-cutting at labor's expense. The truth seems to be that under the basing point system identical prices have heretofore been quoted at delivery points for many steel products by competing concerns. One may argue that competition among the steel companies would have produced results socially more advantageous if this artificial pricing system had never developed. But in view of the fact that the marketing area within which mills compete for custom has been greatly widened by such methods of quoting prices, it cannot be maintained that competition is non-existent. It simply manifests itself in different ways.

Now comes Mr. Murray and inferentially suggests that it would be better for labor if there were no competitive price cutting. At least that appears to be the practical conclusion to be drawn from his finding of lower wage rates with lower prices bid on Government contracts. To make the confusion of counsel worse, representatives of mills paying wages below these of the pacemakers protest that any raising of their wage rate would put them out of the running entirely so far as Government contracts are concerned. That testimony, too, lends support to the argument that high steel prices with a minimum amount of competitive price-cutting represents the ideal situation from the viewpoint of organized labor.

Clearing The Way For GHA.

Justice Bailey's decision that the Group Health Association is not operating in violation of the law should promptly terminate organized opposition to this interesting and potentially important experiment. Certainly Washington hospitals can no longer reasonably withhold their service from members of the GHA. To deny hopital facilities to patients and doctors because of their affiliation with a legally approved organization would be arbitrary in the extreme.

Charges of illegality against the GHA have undoubtedly hampered its progress. So long as there was a possibility that the court might find the health co-operative to be operating in violation of the law the public has been inclined to question its permanency. But the clear logic of Justice Bailey's opinion will go a long way toward resolving doubts of this nature. Citizens are now entirely free to seek better health service by the co-operative method, if they believe that such a move is to their advantage.

The court found that the GHA is not itself practicing medicine. It is merely an agency through which individuals may contract for medical service to be rendered by duly licensed physicians. The relationship between the GHA and its members is clearly shown by the fact that it makes no effort to control the manner of treatment which its doctors shall prescribe. This analysis on the part of the court will probably induce many persons to ask why the charges of illegality were ever brought.

It is plain, too, that the health co-operative could have been classified as an insurance company only by a strained interpretation of the law. The association does not provide for "payment of indemnity on account of sickness." The benefits granted its members consist entirely of medical service.

With this clean bill of health from the courts, sniping at the GHA, if continued, will arouse proper resentment. Apparently the organization is destined to become a definite and important part of Washington's system of providing medical care. As a venture it certainly offers enough advantages to justify a fair trial with full public co-operation.

The only test which the GHA still has to meet is that of service to its own members. That being the case, the not-too-intelligent opposition which has heretofore come from some of the medical profession might well be changed to co-operative interest in an experiment that may solve some of the health problems of this complicated age.

The "Death Sentence."

Speaking before the American Bar Association convention at Cleveland, William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, said that the phrase "death sentence" applied to Section 11 of the holding company act has done inconceivable harm. "Publicity-wise it was clever," Mr. Douglas admitted, "practically it was very damaging. It cast the shadow of a hangman's noose on a purpose and program that are constructive and beneficial."

After reading Mr. Douglas' very able and temperate address outlining the commission's plans for giving effect to the controversial "death sentence" clause, one is disposed to agree that the term has become a misnomer. But it would be a mistake to assume that in the fight against the holding company legislation this term was used as a mere catchword of lobbyists for the utility interests. There was a real and justified fear that in the rush and hurry of the Administration's zeal for reform, constructive ends would be sought through destructive means.

Mr. Douglas has made it clear that he is in full sympathy with the ends sought by the law. He advanced strong arguments in favor of the break-up of geographically diversified holding companies into well-integrated units. Not content with a purely theoretical exposition of the advantages of the simplified organization, he presented the results of a study strongly indicating that "mere diversification," that is, "mere scatteration of properties and investments" has not resulted in greater stability or security of earnings. On the contrary, his figures indicate "that the integrated systems were less vulnerable to business depression than the scattered or diversified system, in terms of revenue from sales of electricity."

Nevertheless, despite his firm belief in the superiority of the simplified structure at which the law aims, Mr. Douglas appreciates the importance of deliberate action. He proposes to approach the goal slowly, possibly by a series of steps instead of one big jump. He even admits that it may take years to accomplish the task. Finally he urges the industry to work with the SEC by formulating its own plans for compliance.

A program of enforcement launched in such a reasonable way will do more than anything else to convince those subject to the so-called "death sentence" that their fears have been greatly exaggerated.

Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Motivation In Medicine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From a layman's standpoint, at least, I think your "Letters" department is about the most helpful thing in your paper, and thank you for "Rugged Individualist's" letter on "State Medicine" on July 23.

I have seen much the same type of indifference shown in regular hospitals, and by private physicians. Motivation is the real crux of the issue. Aside from the question of choosing skilled assistance, and having the money to pay for it—how is one to know he is in the hands of a doctor sufficiently interested in him?

Just as competition is the purifying life germ of business, so also, it is needed in the medical world. It exists under the present system except that, because of the nature of the case, the physician always has the advantage, since the patient is not supposed to know much about himself, and it is medical policy not to tell him the modus operandi. When we get true preventive medicine this will be different.

Life insurance companies are the only logical backers of the healing arts, for they are the only ones who lose if the patient loses. Some day medical schools will put more stress on the spirit back of healing and not run all to technique. Some doctors prove the truth of the old saying, "Love finds a way," and they are the great in the profession.

Until people can be sure that all motivation has risen to a truly spiritual plane, some will follow the example of Emmanual Kant: When he was in his 20's the doctors told him he had but a short time to live. It made him mad! And this, perhaps, stimulated his circulation. Anyway, he never went to a doctor again, and he lived to be around 80.

CLARA LOUISE JOHN.
Washington, July 23.

Hull And Mexico.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You did well to set up in box form two comments on Secretary Hull's letter to Mexico. He made this letter public seeking acclaim. "Fides," a frequent contributor to your column of intelligent articles, asserts, "Mexico is today a bankrupt country." Mr. Hichborn in the adjacent column in almost parallel lines says: "It is an impoverished state with disrupted finances."

If the country is bankrupt, as "Fides" believes, what advantage follows our sharpened speech? Why be disagreeable to a state vexed with poverty? Is this approved good neighbor conduct? I am in sympathy with Mr. Hichborn's demand that Secretary Hull make immediate, formal, even sharp, demand on the Soviets for the $500,000,000 Soviet owes American citizens.

Why does Hull strike like Jersey lightning at Mexico and drawl like cold molasses when talking with the Soviets?

ANDREW OLIVENT.
Washington, July 26.

Filipino And Puerto Rican.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After reading your editorial "Frenzied Puerto Ricans," on July 26, I cannot but think that these American citizens do not know what they want.

In contrast with the political status of the Filipinos the Puerto Ricans are "sitting pretty." They are citizens of the United States and enjoy, without qualification or exception, all the rights and privileges which an American citizen residing in any of the States (except the District of Columbia) enjoys.

The Filipinos, on the other hand, even before the passage of the Philippine independence act, have been subjected to numerous humiliating, discriminatory, unjust and unwarranted treatments, both official and otherwise.

The Filipino cannot apply for naturalization, even if he wants to. He cannot become an officer of the Army or Navy even if he has graduated from West Point or Annapolis. He is being legislated against in Congress, and from the judicial bench emanate uncalled-for remarks which are totally foreign to the subject matter of the case, which are derogatory, not only to the individual Filipino party before the bar, but to all Filipinos as a people. But on top of that, when there is a necessity of sending Americans overseas, as has happened during the World War, he is included in all mobilization plans on the ground that he owes allegiance to the American flag.

The Puerto Ricans are not similarly treated, so what more do they want?

As a Filipino, I dare say that if the status of the Philippines and the Filipinos were like that of the Puerto Ricans, there would probably have been no clamor for independence. Even now, I think that if there is a chance of working out a status for the Filipinos similar to that of the Puerto Ricans, there would be a change in the public attitude toward 'independence."

A FILIPINO.

Traffic Suggestions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Standing on almost any corner in Washington, a careful observer cannot fail to notice that the interval between the lights is too long. Proof of this is furnished in the fact that during a considerable portion of the interval, often one-half, no autos are passing on the green light; also that most of the waiting pedestrians, losing patience, cross against the red light.

Now were the interval one-half what it is, traffic would move faster and pedestrians would await their turns more patiently. Less time would be lost in an unnecessarily long interval.

Traffic lights in Jacksonville, Fla., for instance, illustrate my contention. The interval is short, traffic and pedestrians are more frequently on the move, and the latter who cross against the red light are the exception and not the rule, as seems to be the case here.

The average pedestrians in Washington, it seems to me, standing on the curb waiting to cross, are like sheep; when one starts over against the red light nearly all follow. A few think for themselves, patiently awaiting their turn.

Another fact: Most pedestrians watch the autos. When the coast seems clear, over they scoot, very often to find themselves between two lines of cars. It seems to me that a plain sign on street corners reading "Watch the lights, not the autos," would do some good. Suggestion has wonderful influence with all mankind.

Pedestrians have no right to cross the street on the drivers' right of way. If they do, and are injured, they have no one to blame but themselves and no jury would give them damages.

No Big Ship Hurry.

In approving the plans of the Navy Department to speed up the construction of some 23 warships, funds for which were provided by Congress at its recent session, President Roosevelt lets it be known that he is in no hurry to embark on the building of superbattleships of more than 35,000 tons.

According to the President and high naval authorities, the present international situation is such as not to justify this almost revolutionary change. The discretionary powers granted the Chief Executive to increase the size and almost double the cost of dreadnaughts is not exercised for the present at least, and the United States avoids the possible responsibility of taking the initiative in the phase of naval competition.

The reason for increasing the limits of the London Naval Treaty of 1936 was the belief that Japan was contemplating if not constructing dreadnaughts of more than 35,000 tons. Japan refused to admit or deny the charge. The report and the attitude of the Far Eastern empire caused the nations signatory to the pact—France, Great Britain and the United States—to invoke the escalator clause which would free them of the limitations on the maximum size of battleships.

In approving the naval appropriations bill, Congress granted the President the discretionary authority to proceed with the construction of two dreadnaughts of not more than 45,000 tons if in his opinion there was reason to believe that other nations were exceeding the treaty limits of 35,000 tons.

If Japan is building or contemplating the building of 42,000-ton superbattleships it is no immediate menace to other naval powers. It already has its hands full in trying to conquer China. Its economic condition is now desperate, and following a prolonged war it would be in no position to attack a major nation.

On Wooing The Labor Vote.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congressmen Lewis, in opposing Senator Tydings in our sister State of Maryland, offers as a reason why he should be elected the fact that his record shows that he has always been 100 per cent for organized labor. When a man is 100 per cent for anything, it means that he is for it, right or wrong. So let us see just what the unorganized mass of citizens may expect from those candidates who are appearing before organized labor bodies and assuring them that they will be with them, right or wrong, in exchange for votes.

We have recently seen in this country:

(1) Factories seized and forcibly held by striking labor factions, expensive machinery sabotaged, etc.

(2) Our merchant marine practically driven from the seas and our foreign commerce turned over to foreign lines because of the activities of foreign-born radicals who could not have succeeded except for the encouragement they received from Washington.

When Senator Copeland tried to bring about the deportation of Harry Bridges, Australian-born agitator, charged with being a Communist, such deportation was resisted by Secretary of Labor Perkins and was defeated.

As this is being written, thousands of acres of fine timber are being destroyed by fires, many alleged by officials to be of incendiary origin and resulting from the bitter labor wars in the lumber industry in the States of Washington and Oregon, and especially around Seattle. The record of such things as these could be multiplied a thousandfold, but space does not permit. The great mass of the American people are disgusted by such methods, and they see no reason why they should be necessary in order to bring about so-called "social justice."

If lawmakers and would-be lawmakers are ready to pledge allegiance to the perpetrators of such deeds as these in return for votes, the unorganized masses of the people, who have to foot the bills for such folly, will have no alternative but to band together, and sink all other considerations until men of the type already in office are retired and those seeking to get in office on the strength of those ideas are definitely defeated.

This is not intended as a condemnation of all labor unionists. As we look about us at the many substantial, patriotic and Christian men who are also members of labor unions, we know that in a showdown they would not approve any of these tactics. Unfortunately, they never have an opportunity for the showdown.

It is the radical fringe that makes the noise. There is an old saying that "It is the squeaking axle that gets the grease," and because this radical fringe is noisy and active and very unscrupulous, our lawmakers surrender to them. As between a man who is willing to sell his right to independent judgment in return for votes and the man who has backbone enough to risk his political life and political future rather than make such a surrender, we should choose the latter.

OLD-TIMER.
Washington, July 25.

The Post Impressionist

12 Years Old.

I AWAKENED on that hot June morning (how many years ago?) with the realization that I was now 12 years old—a grown man finding it high time to put away childish things.

Hurriedly I reviewed those things that, in my adolescent opinion, constituted the deeds and actions of a full-grown man. My off-color vocabulary was limited almost solely to "hell" and "damn" and, to be quite frank, had never been called upon to any great extent. Of course, on my frequent hikes over the vast Portner estate adjoining our little town I had, with a justifiable thrill, shrieked imprecations at imaginary figures lurking in the boxwoods: "Damn you, you old heller, you!" Pretty hot stuff, that.

A resort to strong drink had never entered my mind. My mother, an ardent prohibition advocate, was wont to regale her sons with daily accounts of alcohol and its effects on the human brain and stomach. I had no desire to present the former with little white worms and the latter with countless jagged holes.

Earlier experiments had convinced me that I would never master the art of mouthing a handful of "Beechnut Fine-Cut" and spray with unerring accuracy those incautious Junebugs who ventured into the "ambeer" range in the style of one Snapper Larkin, a local hero, ten years my senior.

Then, suddenly, inspiration struck with the stunning swiftness of a lightning bolt. Clutching the dollar bill found under my cereal dish at breakfast, I made way to the Prince William Pharmacy, just then opening its shutters to the morning sunlight.

"A package of cigarettes for my father," I gulped. "He—he just got in town this morning."

Kindly old Doc Johnson never questioned the lie. Armed with the package and a double handful of matches, purloined earlier from the kitchen, I set out for my favorite hideaway—the swimming pool of the Portner estate, now crumbling into dust and a veritable haven for lizards, toads and small boys of the town.

Seated in the shade afforded by willow trees bending over the deep end of the pool, I smoked, in chain-fashion, possibly half the cigarettes in the package before deciding that my initiation into this art was complete. I was over halfway home before results were apparent. I shudder even now, years later, to think of the spectacle I must have created in my reeling voyage up Church street and thence to Center. Agonized retching marked every step of the way. My abdominal muscles were sore for weeks after.

My mother, discovering my feeble attempts to enter the house unnoticed, was quick to perceive my difficulty.

"You've been smoking, son," she said, sadly.

"No," I answered, and I looked her right in the eye. "No, I haven't."

"I'm going to punish you," she continued, "first, because you lied to me and, second, because you're far too young to smoke."

I can truthfully say that, with a dozen or less exceptions—those times when she was too ill to administer them and I was not available to take the receiving end—I did not miss a day in the next three years that did not find at least one "thrashing" forthcoming.

Daily I would come into the house after school reeking of tobacco. At times there would be cigarettes in my pockets. On other occasions well-meaning neighbors would stoop to espionage. Even when confronted with one of these eyewitness accounts, when my mother could recite for me the time, place and length of my sinning, I lied manfully and consistently. It soon developed into a sort of game between us.

"You've been smoking, haven't you, son?" she would say. "Tell me the truth, promise me you'll stop, and I won't thrash you this time."

"No," was the invariable answer. "Honestly, I haven't."

My mother was a methodical woman. The ritual never varied.

The ordeal lasted possibly three minutes. Shoulders hunched and hands jammed into pockets to support beltless trousers, I suffered in silence. Large for my age and quite strong, it never occurred to me to take the belt from my mother and defy her to continue. After a few months of this daily dose of correction, the thrashings became no more of a worry than a minor headache. I think it caused my mother a great degree of irritation when, toward the last, her best efforts could elicit no answering yells from me.

On my fifteenth birthday my mother gave me a carton of cigarettes and a snap lighter for a present. Better to smoke openly at home before her, she said, than to go through another period of lies and punishment of the type just closed. Gazing at her gift, I burst into tears and ran from the house.

I did not smoke again until my twenty-first birthday, two years after my mother's death.

Pro-Hitler

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We thank you for bringing Mr. Pegler back to your columns, for we have certainly enjoyed his honest, frank statements of most matters However, we take issue with him on his apparently sarcastic references to the Nazi bunds in the United States. Please understand, I am not German; not a drop of German blood in my family, for we are all strictly English and Scotch colonial stock, and proud of it, but we are convinced that the work of Mr. Adolf Hitler, in Germany, is a necessary expedient.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Unanimous Unconcern.

INTERVIEWED in London by a journalist from the Star, Miss Peggy Hopkins Joyce is said to have said: "Everywhere I go they ask me the same two questions—'Are you in love, Peggy?' and 'when are you going to marry?' "

PEGLER.

These be intimate questions, and I hereby offer to accept the presidency of a great international order of those who never have asked and never will ask them—not out of good manners, however, but because we can imagine, in the phrase of Bunker Bean, nothing of less consequence. Not to trap any members onto the rolls by secret reservations, I openly propose in advance that this society be further committed to a program of vigorous and unflagging indifference as to whether Miss Greta Garbo has married, intends to marry or doesn't give a whoop in hell for Leopold Stokowsky; where and when Charlie Chaplin married Miss Paulette Goddard; whether Miss Lupe Velez remains married to or gets a divorce from Johnny Weissmuller, and whether Mr. Billy Rose, the present husband of Miss Fanny Brice, has any intention or desire to marry any other lady, particularly Miss Eleanor Holm Jarrett, the swimmer.

* * * *

THIS PROSPECTUS clears up the current, pressing business of the proposed society, but the program should be left open at one end so that other items may be added as they occur in the romantic life of persons of similar distinction. Someone may wish to nominate for the official and formal inattention of our society the affairs of Mr. Tommy Manville, but I, for one, would argue against their adoption on the ground that the roll of those who would rather not hear any more about the love life of this scion and who find the mere mention of his name more or less sick-making is limited only by the roster of the human race.

We should, I think, confine our indifference to live issues, not waste it on the confirmation of conquests already won. I would apply the same thought to any future involvements of Enzo Fiermonte, the Italian pugilist who married the widow of an Astor but presently asked Madison Square Garden to get him a fight, saying to Mr. James J. Johnston, the matchmaker, "I gotta earna my leeving; thees is a hellova way to earna my leeving."

A friend to whom I explained the purposes of the society expressed eagerness to become one of the founding members and proposed that we add to the list of matters to which we will address our active indifference the question of who is to play the role of Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind." It later developed, however, that the lady who is to play this role already had been selected without our having noticed as much, so we decided that this one was finished business and need not clutter up our program. We did think, though, that the social activities of Countess Dorothy Di Frasso, of Hollywood, no matter who the countess might be—and we are sure we do not know—would bear watching and, given a little more publicity in the gossip columns, might qualify for the full force of our unanimous unconcern. And we would have placed on the tentative list the marrying of that Chicago lady who inherited a patent medicine fortune, except that we could not remember any of her names. This seemed to dispose of her without a contest.

REGARDING Miss Joyce, whose remarks on love and marriage inspired this idea, the story from London observed that she married first in 1912—a subtle but potent reminder that this inveterate bride has been marrying, off and on, for a quarter of a century.

A whole generation has been born and come to manhood and womanhood since she took her first vows, and we look for a large list of eligibles among this class, many of whom may wonder why anyone ever asked Miss Joyce whether she were in love and when she was going to marry. Among the elders, nevertheless, there must be many others who took her ventures calmly and never asked her or even themselves, "Is Peggy Joyce in love?" Gallup might take a poll on that one.

Assurance is given that anyone wishing to join our society need have no fear that any inside clique will commit the members to the Spanish loyalists, the New Deal or the C. I. O. or against any or all of these or anything else. We are neither for nor against anybody or anything, for indifference is our invariable policy, and this be our motto:—So what?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

The Joe Cook-Elmer Twitchell Plane.

Now it's the pickaback or "hook-and-eye" plane! If two planes can travel that way, why not three or four? We may soon have them hopping off on round-the-world flights in layers.

* * * *

Elmer Twitchell announces that he is co-operating with Joe Cook in a Super-Pickaback-and-Dory plane. Joe and Elmer will soon attempt a crossing, using three planes and a rowboat. The planes will be known, of course, as the Three Hawaiians.

* * * *

It works like this: Plane No. 1 is the mother plane. Plane No. 2 is hooked to the top of it, and Plane No. 3 is buttoned to the top of No. 2. Atop of all sits a Chinese snare drum artist. A rowboat is attached to the bottom plane.

II.

Elmer, the pilot, sits in the bottom plane with Joe Cook fastened to his left shoulder by a series of spigots. Both are asleep. The starting signal is given by a Hindu magician, who fires a pistol at the Chinese drummer. The Chinaman, pinked slightly, bangs the bass drum inadvertently and in his anger upsets a pitcher of water.

III.

The water drips down on Joe Cook, who, in reaching around for an umbrella, arouses Elmer from a sound sleep, causing him to lunge forward against a device which starts all three motors so suddenly that the Chinaman is dislodged and falls into the rowboat.

IV.

The added weight in the rowboat causes it to exert so much backdrag that it pulls the mother plane right out from under the other planes. This leaves only two planes to make the flight.

V.

Elmer and Joe then match pennies to see whether they continue in Plane 2 or Plane 3. While they are looking for a penny that has rolled under a stowaway named Gus, smoke signals bring news that Joe's license has been suspended for parking near a hydrant.

VI.

Elmer leaves Joe and Plane 2 in midair, climbs into the top plane and heads for Los Angeles. He reaches Moscow, but under an assumed name. A rich Chicago man buys him a new rowboat. (Further details upon request.—Ed.)

POLITICAL SUCCESS.

You talk and talk into a mike
And get most any place you like;
There really is no stopping you
If you've a good sound-wagon, too.

Chamberlain Had To Accept Risks In Sending Lord Runciman As Czech-Nazi Mediator; World Peace Hangs On Outcome.

Paris, July 27.—Cautious man though he is, Mr. Chamberlain has had to accept the risks of sending Lord Runciman to Prague as mediator in the Nazi-Czech dispute.

They are great risks. For on the outcome of this dispute more than on any other depends the issue of peace or war, immediately and for the future as well.

LIPPMANN.

The Runciman mission, whatever the outcome, means that Britain is engaged in the fate of central Europe and that the policy of isolation from the continent, or of commitments limited to western Europe, is no longer workable.

It seemed very bold some years ago when Mr. Stanley Baldwin declared that Britain's frontier was on the Rhine; but today Mr. Chamberlain is compelled to recognize that Britan also has a frontier in Bohemia.

For Lord Runciman does not go to Prague in the role of an academic adviser who can, if his advice is disregarded, wash his hands of the consequences. His mission engages the power and the honor of the empire in the most difficult and dangerous issue of our time.

He Would Take No Such Risks

WE MAY be sure that Mr. Chamberlain would be taking no such risks if any safer course were open to him. But the fact is that the problem of Czechoslovakia is on the point of exploding in the face of all the statesmen of Europe.

It has reached a point where it would seem that even Hitler himself sees that events are beyond his control and that he may be dragged into a war which neither he nor his most responsible advisers can desire.

That surely is why he has been sending his personal representative, Capt. Wiedemann, to London with assurances that he desires a pacific solution. And that is why, in spite of all the declarations against anything in the nature of an international solution when Germany's vital interests are concerned, Hitler is supporting a plan which makes the Czech-German controversy a European rather than a merely German question.

The same grim threat of a great war which has caused Mr. Chamberlain to entangle himself in Central Europe, also has caused Hitler to accept outside intervention. The danger of war is real beyond any doubt.

It is real, first of all, because at bottom the claims of the German Nazis in Bohemia are in principle irreconcilable with the vital interests of the Czechoslovak Republic. It is real, second, because the German Nazis are revolutionists who will not in the end hesitate to use violence, and the Czechs are a spirited people who will die rather than submit.

Because the Nazis will use violence and because the Czechs will fight, there is no present possibility either of a prolonged deadlock or of a bloodless conquest as in Austria. The failure to find a solution means war. And this war must mean a European war, which draws in France, Russia and Britain on one side, and almost certainly Italy on the other.

In the past week, at the very time when the King and Queen were in Paris, it became clear that no ordinary solution of the conflict is possible. The Czechs have been working on concessions to their German minority. But these concessions, however just and generous and even Utopian they would seem if granted to any other national minority in Europe, are bound to be quite unacceptable to the Sudeten Nazis or to their backers among the radical Nazis of the Reich. It had become evident a week ago that to submit the Czech proposal to the Czech parliament would almost surely mean some kind of uprising in the German districts of Bohemia.

Hitler Would Be Compelled to Act

IT BECAME clear, too, that this time Hitler would be compelled by forces within Germany to act, that he could not again retreat, as he did in May, without losing more prestige than a dictator can afford to lose. Then it became known that the Germans were feverishly at work constructing the Siegfried line in the west, and that they would complete it by about August 15. Thus just at the moment when things were likely to be most explosively critical in Prague, the Germans would be ready for the military consequences of an attempt to settle the issue by force.

It was to avert the crisis which was due within two weeks when the Czech-German negotiations broke down that Mr. Chamberlain, with French support, decided to intervene. Lord Runciman's mission promises at the least to give both the Germans and the Czechs something new to think about, to divert them for a time from the embittered realization that their differences are irreconcilable.

Assuming as one must, that Hitler wishes to avoid a major war which involves Great Britain, the mere presence of Lord Runciman in Prague would seem to be a guarantee that nothing very provocative will be done right under his eyes.

Problem Apparently An Insoluble One

Beyond this breathing spell it is impossible to see very far. Lord Runciman is undertaking to find a solution of a problem which has every appearance of being insoluble.

For that reason there are many who fear that there is a hidden purpose in the matter, and that Lord Runciman's task is to avoid war by delivering Czechoslovakia to Germany by gradual stages and by subtle devices.

One must recognize the fact that there are influential elements both in France and England who are prepared to do this, who are prepared, that is to say, to let Hitler have his way if only he proceeds without too much obvious violence.

There are many who think that this is the inauguration of another scheme, similar to the non-intervention committee in Spain, which will permit Hitler to work his will behind a screen of formulae of impartiality. But this is, I think an unnecessarily cynical view considering the fact that the issue is much clearer than it was in Spain, and that Lord Runciman has an aroused and alert public opinion to consider, as well as the fighting spirit of the Czechs and the vital interests of France.

Above all, there is the fact that here there is involved before the judgment of all the democracies of the world the personal honor of an English gentleman and the honor of the British people.

Though the moral condition of Europe has become progressively degraded, there is no reason to think that things are as yet so bad that the honor of Great Britain, when clearly and decisively engaged, is of no account.

Republican Spain Takes The Offensive.

BORROWING MARK TWAIN'S words, Republican Spain is now in a position to state that the report of its demise was greatly exaggerated.

As far back as last April the feeling was widespread that it was all over but the shouting so far as the Spanish civil war was concerned. Franco's armies, after retaking Teruel on February 22, entered Catalonia on March 27 and reached the sea three weeks later, thus splitting government territory in two. On April 19 Franco announced over the radio that the war was won.

He was not alone in this belief. Messrs. Chamberlain and Mussolini apparently thought likewise and so indicated in one of the important provisions of the Anglo-Italian agreement of April 17. That provision had to do with the eventual withdrawal of Italian "volunteers" from Spain and it was stipulated that those not withdrawn before the war ended were to be moved out of Spain afterwards. In other words the anticipation was that the war might end before the machinery of withdrawal could be put into effective operation.

* * * *

NOW, three months after London and Rome had apparently assumed that the Barcelona regime was about to give up the ghost, Republican Spain is acting like anything but a corpse. For three days its armies have been on the offensive in Catalonia and now appear to be at the gates of Gandesa, occupied by the insurgents on April 2.

It would be rash indeed to conclude from this show of energy that the tide had turned or is about to turn in the Spanish civil war. The Spanish government forces have started other offensives which they have been unable to carry on for any great length of time. There was the Bruente offensive during the summer of 1937, for instance, which petered out after Bruente was retaken by Franco's men on July 24. There was the surprising capture of Teruel on December 21 which the government troops were only able to hold for two months. And there have been other temporarily successful attempts by the Republicans to break through Franco's lines.

* * * *

THE PRESENT offensive in Catalonia which so far has produced some striking gains for the government may meet with the same fate. Indeed, the insurgents counter Barcelona's claims of victory in the Gandesa sector by claims of their own of vast stretches of government territory taken in Estramadura.

In any event, however, the fact is remarkable that after having been given up for lost three months ago and after receiving terrible punishment since then, Republican Spain is capable of such a display of vigor as that being demonstrated in its Catalonian offensive. If it means nothing else it would certainly seem to mean that the government is capable of holding out for a long time.

* * * *

ONCE AGAIN, therefore, Spain has upset all the convenient calculations of the chancelleries, in particular those of Chamberlain and Mussolini.

The latter now finds himself in the position of a man holding a bear by the tail. The perch may be uncomfortable but it might prove more uncomfortable to let go. Having willed Franco's victory he cannot afford to let events take their course in the Iberian peninsula. But it is not so clear that he can now afford to intervene on a scale sufficient to bring the war to a speedy close.

Since it has always been to his interest to have Franco win as speedily as possible the presumption must be that the actual extent of Italian intervention in Spain has been commensurate with the Fascist government's capacity to intervene. And now he also has to face the possibility that intervention even on a small scale might upset the Anglo-Italian apple cart.

* * * *

CERTAINLY renewed Italian intervention in Spain at this time would go contrary to the spirit of the agreement of April 17 which presumably does not go into full effect until after all Italian volunteers have been withdrawn from Spain.

On the other hand the continuance of the Spanish struggle has also embarassed Chamberlain. He wants the Anglo-Italian treaty to go into force. It is being held up by the Spanish situation and because it is held up danger exists that it may blow up as did the Anglo-Italian gentlemen's agreement of January, 1937. And if it does blow up, the consequences for the Chamberlain government and Chamberlain fears for Europe might be disastrous.

* * * *

THAT IS WHY the suspicion is growing that, once Parliament has adjourned as it will Friday, Chamberlain may put the Anglo-Italian agreement into force by executive action. Although ratification by Parliament is customary, it is not essential. However, Chamberlain is pledged to make a settlement in Spain the basis of any Anglo-Italian accord and the terms of that settlement, presumably, are those embodied in the treaty of April and which have not yet come into force.

There is a possibility that Chamberlain may regard Italy's action in having reduced its troops in Libya, in having ceased anti-British propaganda in Arab countries and in having collaborated on the nonintervention committee as sufficient evidence of her good faith to take loyal execution of the Spanish clauses of the treaty for granted. At any rate it is interesting that the British premier has refused to promise to recall Parliament if there should be any change in the situation during the next months.

Welcome Mr. Hoover.

From the Daily Province, Vancouver, B. C.

Mr. Herbert Hoover, sometime President of the United States, is going fishing. He is coming fishing in British Columbia, in our Cariboo country, where the rainbows and the kamloops and the great char are.

He is coming with his friend, Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University. Last year Dr. Wilbur took a 20-pound rainbow, up at Stuart Lake. You can imagine the rest. You can imagine that Mr. Hoover has never heard the last of Dr. Wilbur's B. C. Rainbow. There is much more than a pot of gold at the end of one of these rainbows, and of course there is no end.

Perhaps Mr. Hoover is coming to see whether his friend the professor is just another of those immortal fishermen, but he can be told now, before he comes, that those rainbows are here. And he will have the looking for them in our beautiful wilderness, than which, he will say when he has seen it, there can be no land better under the wide sky.

It is evidently better to have been President than to be so, for many reasons, but for none more cogently than the business of going fishing in the Cariboo country, where mere university presidents can get 20-pounders, where 40-pounders are not unattainable, where you can sit under the pines by the campfire after the going down of the sun, wondering whether those erstwhile affairs of state were really so important after all.

Beware Of Inventors

By Vansant Coryell.

Mark Twain Refused.

MARK TWAIN, the beloved Samuel Langhorne Clemens, of Hannibal, Mo., who grew up to be the greatest literary lion of his time, lost more than one hard-earned fortune by investing it in hair-brained schemes described to him in glittering terms by their inventors. Once, for instance, he sank a large sum of money, which he could ill afford, in a perpetual motion machine which, shortly after the deal had been consummated, came to a shuddering stop.

One afternoon, while sitting on his veranda, Mark Twain observed a tall, spare man, slightly stooped, with kindly blue eyes and an eager face, making his way up the path with a strange contraption under his arm.

Yes, it was an invention. The man explained it to the humorist, who listened politely but explained when the man had finished that he had been burned too many times.

"But," cried the man, 'I'm not asking you to invest a fortune. You can have as large a share as you want for $500."

Mark Twain shook his head. The invention didn't make sense. The tall, stooped figure shouldered his contraption and started away.

"What did you say your name was?" the author called after him.

"Bell," replied the inventor a little sadly, "Alexander Graham Bell."

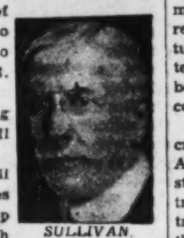
Commentator Finds Tobacco Regulations Rewarding Lazy Farmers And Penalizing Those Who Cultivate Diligently.

I HAVE before me an announcement made by AAA on July 23, and I here set down some reflections inspired by it. The announcement contains the regulations pertaining to tobacco. "These regulations"—I quote—"are issued in accord with the marketing quota provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1933." There is much more regulation of tobacco planting than this. But I confine myself here to what is in the regulations announced July 23. I quote the first regulation:



SULLIVAN.

"Each farm operator will be given a marketing card showing the amount of tobacco he can sell without penalty."

I call attention to the last three words, "sell without penalty." AAA propagandists sometimes say that a farmer can raise as much of any crop as he pleases. They say that and they stop with saying that. They create the impression that they are not limiting crops—though how anyone can hope to get away with that impression I cannot imagine.

True, as to tobacco, a farmer can plant and raise all he pleases. It's when he tries to sell that they catch him. He can raise all he pleases—but he can't sell all he pleases, except by paying a penalty. AAA tells him how much he can raise and sell, fixes a quota for him. On whatever he sells above his quota, he must pay the penalty. If he smokes all above his quota himself, or chews it all, AAA will not crack down on him. Maybe if he taught his horses and cattle to smoke and chew, he could avoid the penalty. Yet I am not sure about that. In the case of corn, if a farmer raises more than his quota, and if he feeds some of the excess to his hogs, and if he thereafter tries to sell some of those hogs fed with forbidden corn, AAA will penalize him.

Must Pay Penalty For Overproduction

IN THE TOBACCO regulations each farmer is given a quota card. The card tells him how much tobacco he can raise and sell. Let us say his quota is 4,000 pounds. He can plant as many acres as he thinks will yield 4,000 pounds, and he can sell his 4,000 pounds without penalty. But if he finds that he planted too much, or that nature was too generous, or that he worked too hard cultivating his crop—if for any reason his crop is more than 4,000 pounds, then he must pay a penalty. The penalty is set out in the regulations. I quote:

"The penalty is 50 per cent of the sale price; or 3 cents a pound, whichever is higher."

That penalty—50 per cent of the price he gets when he sells—is severe, obviously. Yet the tobacco farmer ought to be grateful. He ought to be glad AAA has become lenient. Three years ago, in the case of potatoes—until the Supreme Court invalidated the original AAA act—the penalty for raising and selling more than your quota was fine and imprisonment. And there was also a penalty of fine and imprisonment for anyone who bought potatoes raised in excess of a farmer's quota—"bootleg" potatoes.

But I proceed to another provision of the tobacco regulations. I quote a paragraph. Don't try to understand it—I doubt if you can. I'll give the translation following the quotation:

"A farmer who has a quota exceeding the tobacco available for marketing may authorize the transfer of that part of his quota not needed . . . If quotas are transferred from one farm to another through direct negotiations between the operators of the farms concerned, the consideration for the transfer may be whatever the operators agree upon. If a warehouseman acts as agent in the transfer, the rate of consideration is fixed at 5 cents per pound."

Underproduction Now a Cash Asset

THAT MEANS: Suppose a farmer has a quota of 4,000 pounds which he can raise and sell without penalty. Suppose he doesn't care to raise 4,000 pounds. Suppose he decides to take it easy and raise only 1,000 pounds.

That farmer now has a valuable right, duly attested by a card which he can carry in his pocket. It's a negotiable instrument, convertible into cash. It is the right to sell 3,000 pounds of tobacco which he did not raise. This right he can sell. He can sell it to other farmers. For it he will get roughly 5 cents per pound for each pound not raised and sold. For not raising and selling 3,000 pounds the reward would be roughly $150.

The persons who buy the right are the other farmers who were rash enough to plant more than AAA said they should, or who were so unwise as to cultivate their crops too diligently, or who were so unfortunate as to suffer from the unanticipated generosity of nature. The buyer can use the right as an offset to the AAA penalty for raising too much.

The farmer who didn't plant as much as AAA said he could gets roughly 5 cents a pound for the pounds he never planted!

Five cents a pound penalty for the farmer who planted more than AAA said he could, or who worked so diligently that he raised a large crop, or who was blessed by nature!

"It's a mad world, my masters."

AAA Tobacco Quota Attacked In Two States

Georgia, Florida Group Opens Court Fight on Penalty Taxes.

By the Associated Press.

Valdosta, Ga., July 27.—Georgia and Florida tobacco growers on the eve of the 1938 sales season today attacked constitutionality of the AAA farm marketing quotas and enjoined the penalty taxes.

Temporary restraining orders issued by State courts here and at Lake City, Fla., affecting auctions at 17 markets opening tomorrow, apparently headed the Government's second attempt at control of tobacco growing toward the Supreme Court, where the first regulatory program under the Kerr-Smith act was ruled invalid.

In Washington, Agriculture Department officials said they would defend the new farm law to the highest court if necessary.

Fear Huge Penalties.

A. J. Little, one of the attorneys bringing the suits, said it was estimated Georgia and Florida growers would have to pay penalties totaling around $4,500,000 if the act was upheld.

He charged quotas for these States were insufficient.

The actions, directed against warehousemen, contended that the agricultural adjustment act of 1938, under which marketing quotas were fixed for the Nation's principal crops, was unconstitutional in that "Congress assumes authorities not directly granted by the Constitution."

The growers asserted tobacco growing is not an interstate industry and therefore not subject to Federal regulation. They also charged marketing quotas violated the section of the constitution protecting individuals from deprivation of life, liberty and property without due process of law.

Will Impound Funds.

Under temporary orders signed by Superior Court Judge W. E. Thomas here and Circuit Judge Harold W. Adams in nearby Lake City, Fla., warehousemen are enjoined from collecting the penalty taxes against growers who exceed their marketing quota. They will be permitted to deduct the amount of the levies, however, with the funds to be impounded by the courts until the issue is decided.

Even as the suits were filed, thousands of South Georgia and North Florida farmers were heaping warehouse floors with the new bright leaf crop.

The Georgians have a quota of about 76,000,000 pounds and a crop estimated between 90,000,000 and 100,000,000 pounds, while Floridans have a quota of approximately 11,000,000, and a crop of around 18,000,000 pounds.

Lehman Wants Niagara Owned By N. Y. State

Also Urges St. Lawrence Be Public Property to Prevent Exploitation.

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., July 27.—Gov. Lehman called upon the State constitutional convention today to adopt a proposal which would assert public ownership of the Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers waterpower sites to prevent their exploitation by private interests.

The Governor re-entered the long-standing fight over development of the State's water resources as differences widened between Republican and Democratic leaders of the convention on revival of the proposal which recently was defeated by the Republican-dominated committee on public utilities.

After tracing the protracted dispute in which the Governor said his predecessors, Govs. Charles E. Hughes, Alfred E. Smith and Franklin D. Roosevelt, had stopped "the development of public waterpower for private gain," Lehman asserted:

"Unless we protect these waterpower resources, history will repeat itself. The private waterpower interests, rendered impotent for the time being, will return for battle."

Naturalist to Talk At Park Program

The first of a series of Thursday after-sunset recreational programs will be held tonight in the amphitheater of Fort Bunker Hill Park, Fourteenth and Perry streets northeast. Feature of the opening entertainment will be a talk by Howard T. Rothrock, acting chief naturalist of the National Park Service. His talk will be illustrated with slides in natural color.

Arthur W. Shively, ranger naturalist attached to the local parks system, will be master of ceremonies for the Thursday series, which will continue as far into the autumn as weather will permit.

Bilateral U. S. Treaties Proposed by Pittman

By the Associated Press.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, suggested yesterday that the United States sign a series of bilateral treaties with important nations as a substitute for international law, which, he said, had proved ineffective. Such a course, said the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, would give this country a definite basis on which to deal with any violation of international codes.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue has established a regional office in Greensboro, N. C., to solve enrichment tax cases and processing tax refund cases—but it offers no opportunities for a job. The work is so technical that the office staff has been selected with a fine tooth comb.

And, happily, the staff was recruited through the civil service. After the selection was made, the staff was brought here for additional training and some are still here in training. To begin with, most of them had to be specially qualified accountants with experience in the textile industry. There is little possiblity that the office will be in operation for more than two years.

Of it, the officials say: "This arrangement is intended to provide the taxpayers of North Carolina and Virginia with an opportunity, not only for an earlier determination of their tax liabilities arising from the decision of the Supreme Court holding the old AAA unconstitutional; but also for more direct contact, during the determination, with examining officers and their supervisors of the Bureau of Internal Revenue."

Internal Revenue Agent in Charge P. M. Sawyer will direct the office. Transfers from the central office are unlikely, although there is the possibility, of course, that a few with certain training may go in key places.

The Rapid City, S. Dak., chapter of the Isaac Walton League has recommended that the water fall at the outlet of the new Lake of the Pines in the Black Hills be named in honor of E. E. ("Nick") Carter, chief of forest management for the U. S. Forest Service, Washington. The newly created lake will provide a 400-acre body of water for recreationists, and from the end of a natural spillway out of the lake water will flow over a series of cascades or cataracts, dropping 150 feet in a distance of about 1,000 feet.

A client came in, saying he had made application with the Civil Service Commission for the job of assistant messenger, and he wondered why the commission didn't let him know when the examination would be held, or something about the state of affairs. We learned, on his behalf, that between 50,000 and 60,000 persons had applied for the same test; that the commission would have to sift through all these applications to see if age limits and other qualifications were conformed with—all this before calling the examination. And, bear in mind, that the commission is starved for funds with which to execute its work. But the more sweetly solemn thought is how Americans right now are grabbing, by the thousands, at any job opportunity.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

A Celebrated Dance Director Will Supervise "Going Native"

Chester Hale, Long Famous in the Theater, Will Arrive Monday to Aid in Local Production; Postman Rings Twice; Irene Purcell Begins Olney Rehearsals; Notes.

IT is with pardonable elation that the management of Loew's Capitol Theater announces the engagement of Chester Hale, internationally known stage and dance director, to supervise the dance numbers and assist in the production of the sixth annual "Going Native" revue, to be staged next month.

BELL.

Mr. Hale, who was himself a dancer of note before transferring his activities to direction, will arrive in Washington on Monday in time to aid in the selection of candidates for the cast and chorus who will be auditioned in the Willard Hotel that evening, beginning promptly at 8 o'clock.

Chester Hale, whose name long has been familiar to Washington theatergoers, has been at the top of his profession for a good many years now. Last year he had a hand in the production of "The Three Waltzes," for the Shuberts, and prior to that had produced a mammoth spectacle for the Dallas Centennial Pan-American Exposition. It was for this production that he assembled his now famous "Texas Comets," since seen on the Capitol stage as a group of the theater's foremost precision dancers.

In 1934, 1935 and 1936, Hale was associated with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and did much of his outstanding work for pictures. Among the gelatins reflecting his skill may be mentioned "Night Is Young," "A Night at the Opera," "Painted Veil," "Rose Marie," "Reckless," "David Copperfield," "Naughty Marietta" and "Anna Karenina," for which he coached Garbo so thoroughly in the Russian mazurka that it was not necessary to engage a "double" to do her dancing for her.

All of this seems to forecast a considerable emphasis on the dance in the new "Going Native," or, at least, the most effulgent string of "line girls" that ever has graced one of these productions and kept the Capitol's front row packed with shiny pates and opera glasses at every performance!

• • • •

We should have suspected that something a little out of the ordinary was afoot for the 1938 "Going Native" the moment we received that wire from Divisional Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc. Mr. Barron remarks, with shrinking modesty that since the annual "Going Native" business has attained the same degree of local interest as the cherry blossoms, presidential inaugurations and the opening of Congress, he thinks it would be fitting to prelude Monday night's auditions with a cozy little dinner party for his staff and the press in the Variety clubrooms, Monday evening at 6. I doubt that he will receive any very violent objections to the idea. And, regardless of any gastronomical consideration, this column has learned from previous experience that these auditions are both interesting and amusing—in addition to being a lot of hard work for those primarily involved. They turn up some splendid talent, from time to time, that otherwise might never be discovered.

From Mrs. Curran deBruler, 3026 Porter street, comes the following, under date of July 26:

"Dear Mr. Bell: This isn't a fan letter, though I assure you I always enjoy your column as much as your most devoted fans (sic). But your account this morning of the 'ten best' was so interesting that I can't resist making this comment:

"I'm glad Helen Hayes topped the list—she'd have had my vote, too; and after her, Katharine Cornell and the Lunts are my favorite actors. Nor is there any doubt about the merits of the rest of the first ten.

"But what seems incredible is that in all the notable performances receiving votes, and even your own list of memorable exceptions, there should nowhere be any mention of Walter Hampden's Cyrano.

"Is it really possible that among all those voters there weren't some who remember that performance? For to me—like the first time I heard the Fifth Symphony, or when I finished 'John Brown's Body'—it was a thing I'll remember 'as long as any guns.' When it was ended, the spell lingered for hours.

"And so I had to ask you. Surely, Cyrano has not been forgotten so soon?

"My best to you and to the theater. And, incidentally, while I have the chance to mention it, don't you agree with me that it is Helen Hayes who ought to play 'The Life of Madame Curie?' Surely the role can be for no one else. Sincerely, (Signed) MARION deBRULER."

I find it difficult to pick a quarrel with Mrs. deBruler. Certainly, Hampden's Cyrano deserves to be included among the distinguished performances of the contemporary theater. And Miss Hayes, to me, too, seems a perfect selection for the role of Madame Curie. With regard to Mr. Hampden, I can only plead, in extenuation, that this column's brief citations were intended to hark back to a considerably earlier era in the theater, which Mr. Morehouse's voters seemed to have forgotten in its entirety—and they weren't all so young as that, either!

Beyond Mr. Morehouse's own meager revelations, I have no way of knowing precisely where Walter Hampden may have stood in the final ratings. I assume, however, that he could not have been completely overlooked. At any rate, I hope not, since he is a personal friend.

And since we seem to have got around to the postman again, my Arlington correspondent who suggested Patsy Kelly for the role of Scarlett O'Hara in Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind"—when, as and if—feels that later comments appearing here were a bit of "spoofing" aimed at him, or her, as the case may be, since anonymity is desired. That, of course, was not the idea. There was a much sounder foundation for the suggestion of Miss Kelly for the role than for mine of Louise Fazenda, May Robson and Shirley Temple.. It was only that I could think of no one else who had not already been nominated, at some time or other, for the part. My incognito correspondent, by the way, is wholly logical in arguing the matter of judicious casting for films.

Irene Purcell, who is to star in "Tonight at 8:30," at Panjandrum Steve Cochran's new Olney Theater next week, arrived in town yesterday and, under the guidance of her impresario, proceeded at once to the rustic playhouse to begin rehearsals of the Coward one-act playlets in which she will appear. Like Elissa Landi, this week's inaugural star, Miss Purcell will make her home on the Olney property during her engagement here. Presumably, on next Monday night, she will sign her name to that autograph oak growing through the lobby of the "South's first professional summer theater."

Miss Purcell, in passing, will be seen in only three of the nine tabloid dramas in which Noel Coward and Gertrude Lawrence appeared for a fortnight at the National before taking New York by storm, as the saying is. Miss Purcell's three will be "Fumed Oak," the best of the lot, in the estimation of this department; "The Astonished Heart" and "Hands Across the Sea."

THE SHUBERTS, astute producers, deplore any occasion which requires elimination of scenes. These eliminations, however, seldom prove wasteful . . . for somehow, some time and some way, new productions are built around the settings eliminated . . . On the night before "The Show Is On" made its Broadway debut, a gag scene was eliminated in which a big red apple was used as a prop . . . "Well," asked the producer, juggling the apple in his hand. "What do we do with this now?" . . . "It's a cinch, Nicky Blair offered. "There's only one thing to do." Produce 'William Tell.'"

A NOTED BROADWAY COUPLE left for a two-week cruise. To their 18-year-old son was intrusted the care of the apartment and their prized canary. The distraught youngster carried the bird's remains to every pet shop in the city until he found a perfect double. Only an expert could have detected the difference. His parents haven't noticed the change. "Only one thing puzzles us," the boy's mother boasts. "After seven years our little canary—which never sang a note—warbles beautifully. In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 27.—When you feel your courage slipping away, take another notch in your belt and hold on. Remember, it takes some of the biggest ones years to accomplish their Machiavellian purposes.

HEDDA HOPPER

Three years ago, Tay Garnett, in his own boat, took a couple of cameramen on a trip around the world, snapping as he went. He made background shots of practically every country. Now, he's helping write a story to fit these scenes, which he'll direct for Walter Wanger, calling it "Trade Winds," and starring Freddie March and Joan Bennett. Garnett had an idea, but it took three years to cash in on it.

Incidentally, Joan had her own hand cast in silver as a present for Mr. Wanger. It now holds red roses on his desk.

When Dancer Joan Davis was taken to the hospital after her sacro-iliac slipped its mooring, she looked at all the pulleys and harnesses over the bed and said: "Gee whiz! Do they expect me to practice while I'm on my back?"

"Why not give up this movie business," said her daughter, "and get your money from the bank like we used to?"

Marjorie Weaver is cut up because columnists had her twirling at the Troc, when she was home sick-listing in bed.

Joe Downing once gave up a New York play to rush to Hollywood for a movie role. Then he was dressed up as a woman and given two lines to speak. His anger took him right back to Broadway. He's back again now doing a part in "Angels With Dirty Faces." Michael Curtiz, directing that picture, after watching Cagney in a love scene, shook his head and said, "What a great lover the world missed when Cagney turned tough."

Nice to see George Bancroft batting in that picture. First time he's ever worked on the Warner lot.

Bette Davis tells me she's going to wear one of Orry-Kelly's new corsets at the Tailwagger's party. Sh-h, don't let the dogs know, Bette.

Wouldn't it be nice if the film industry broke down and let Bette take over Scarlett, now that Margaret Sullavan is out of the running? Stranger things have happened.

And you'll see Eddie Robinson in "The Phantom Crown" with Bette Davis, and I hope, Basil Rathbone in the next most important part.

When Donald Dickson, Metropolitan tenor, gets rolling in "The Desert Song," I'll bet you'll find Rosemary Lane singing opposite him. Florence George is definitely out.

Ginger Rogers is in New York for two months' rest, where she joins her mother, there casting her play called "Funny Man."

Helen Vinson is putting on the dog in Newport, R. I., in summer stock. And the famous candid camera expert, Jerome Zerbe, has turned actor and is playing in "The Road to Rome" with Jane Cowl. Bet we'll have him in the movies yet.

I can hear him in the middle of a scene with Carole Lombard, when she's standing on her head, saying, "Hold that pose—I'll get it." He's the pet of the ladies. Never sends out a bad print.

It might help lots of people if they had Gloria Swanson's success recipe. Understand she collected from Metro, Columbia and Republic—all without ever making a picture. I predict she never will make another.

Mike Romanoff, on emerging from a case of the flu, was accused of scattering germs. "Madam," he said, "Royalty never has germs . . . can't afford to support them."

Tourists opened their mouths—not to put food in them—when Miriam Hopkins appeared at the Tropics in a bathing suit and lunched with her husband.

It happens only occasionally! Along comes a motion picture that leaps from the screen to touch your heart with its gladness and its sadness; its uproarious laughter and the little choke at the throat that follows after. In the Judge Hardy Family, M-G-M has created a real American home that audiences know and understand. Now you'll meet again LEWIS STONE CECILIA PARKER, FAY HOLDEN, and MICKEY ROONEY who's in love with three gals and that's practically polygamy. Then, for good measure there is joyous JUDY GARLAND singing "Meet the Beat of My Heart" and "It Never Rains but It Pours"—both Hits! Here, indeed, is the best picture of the year!

Family Stories Dominate Next Week's Screen

New Pictures and Revivals Will Vie With Summer Theaters and Parks.

Kate Douglas Wiggin's famous story of "Mother Carey's Chickens," as picturized by RKO-Radio, will be presented on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater today for the first time in Washington and will continue as the major attraction on Fifteenth street throughout the ensuing week. An unusually capable cast has been assembled for the interpretation of the pivotal roles in this homely and appealing story, led by Fay Bainter, who recently scored so emphatically in "White Banners;" Anne Shirley, remembered from "Stella Dallas;" Ruby Keeler, Jackie Moran, Ralph Morgan, Alma Kruger, Frank Albertson, Walter Brennan, Margaret Hamilton and Master Donnie Dunagan. Rowland V. Lee directed. An added attraction will be a new Walt Disney Silly Symphony, "Wynken, Blynken and Nod."

Kay Francis will be the pictured star at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, in "My Bill," the story of a mother who has a hard time rearing a family of two sons and two daughters. The supporting cast includes Bonita Granville, Anita Louise, Dickie Moore, Bobby Jordan and numerous others. This is heralded as one of Miss Francis' best recent efforts. On the stage at the Earle next week will be seen in person that droll comedienne of the films, ZaSu Pitts, teamed with Cliff Hall, of "Vas you dare, Sharlie?" fame on the air. Other acts will embrace Corinna Mura, Nelson's Novelties, puppet show; Juanita and Her Skating Champions and Jack Lenny and the Statler Twins, dancers.

"I'll Give a Million," new Twentieth Century-Fox production, will be the major screen attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. In the principal roles will be seen Warner Baxter and Marjorie Weaver, supported by Peter Lorre, Jean Hersholt, John Carradine, J. Edward Bromberg, Lynn Bari, Fritz Feld and Sig Rumann. The story is in comic vein and deals with a rich young man who abandons his yacht to live the life of a hobo. The Capitol's new stage show will be headlined by the Andrews Sisters, harmony singers, and also will include Charles "Slim" Timblin, Jim and Mildred Mulcay, the Five Reillys, dancers, and "The Sophisticated Ladies."

Suggested by Herbert Asbury's book of the same name, "Gangs of New York" will come to the screen at the Metropolitan Theater for the week starting tomorrow. The principal roles are played by Charles Bickford and Ann Dvorak, both long absent from the local screens. The picture was directed by James Cruze and is amply described by its name. The bill also will embrace varied short subjects and full, composite newsreel.

Loew's Palace Theater announces "Love Finds Andy Hardy" as its chief screen feature for the week beginning tomorrow. This is the latest release in the series of domestic comedy-dramas dealing with Judge Hardy and his family, with Lewis S. Stone as the judge and Mickey Rooney as the perplexed young Lothario of the title. Others in the cast include Cecilia Parker, Ann Rutherford, Judy Garland, Lana Turner, Fay Holden and Raymond Hatton. Short reels and "News of the Day" added.

In "Fast Company," another filmed best-seller comes to the screen for the week beginning tomorrow, when Melvyn Douglas and Florence Rice will be seen in the featured roles of this diverting subject at Loew's Columbia Theater. This is a comedy-drama in which furious action is heavily stressed. Included in the supporting cast are Claire Dodd, Louis Calhern, Shepherd Strudwick, Nat Pendleton and Douglas Dumbrille.

The short-reel subjects featuring the new bill opening tomorrow, and continuing for a week, at the Trans-Lux Theater, include a screen study of the methods and work of Steichen, master of the camera; "Seen in Seria," a travelogue; "Stranger than Fiction," and a Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy. The bill will be based on newsreel coverage of the world.

One of the most spectacular of the foreign-made films will be revived for the week beginning next Sunday at the Little Theater, when "The Golem" will be the feature of the bill. The cast of French players appearing in this famous picture is led by Harry Baur, foremost of the Continental cinema actors, who will have Germaine Aussey as his leading woman.

At Stephen E. Cochran's new Olney Theater, out the Georgia avenue pike between Olney and Ashton, the second attraction of the season, beginning next Monday night, will be Irene Purcell in three of the one-act playlets included in Noel Coward's "Tonight at 8:30," "Fumed Oak," "The Astonished Heart," and "Hands Across the Sea." Matinees will be given on Thursday and Saturday at 2:45 p. m., in "The South's first Professional Summer Theater." Tickets are on sale at Tribby's 615 Fifteenth street.

Herbie Holmes continues to please dancers in the Spanish Garden Ballroom at Glen Echo Park and will continue with his music through Saturday night of this week. On August 1, next Monday, Dave McWilliams and his orchestra will return to Glen Echo, where they delighted patrons of the ballroom for 11 summers, up to 1937. The other attractions, in the meantime, continue in full midseason operation, with the famous Crystal Pool high in favor among the 50-odd amusement devices.

So successful was the Washington Players' presentation of Shakespeare's comedy of "As You Like It" Tuesday night, before an audience estimated at 10,000, that it will be repeated in the National Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds tonight. The seventh summer festival program, next Tuesday night, August 2, will be provided by the Blackfriars Guild of Catholic University in Lady Gregory's "The Dragon."

The Mount Vernon daily trips and nightly moonlight excursions down the river of the Wilson Line's steamer, City of Washington, continue to afford large passenger lists a respite from the city's heat. Next Tuesday night, applicants for the Atlantic City "Miss America" beauty contest will be judged aboard the boat.

George Hall and his orchestra will be the special attraction aboard the Potomac River Line's S. S. Potomac on its two moonlight cruises on Saturday night of this week, leaving the Seventh Street wharf at 8:30 p. m. and 12:45 a. m. On Sunday, another salt-water cruise will be made to Colonial Beach.

Three companies submitted bids accompanied by modified proposals for alternate types of equipment. Basic estimates were received from the American Locomotive Co., Auburn, N. Y., which bid $875,000; Busch-Sulzer Brothers Diesel Engine Co., St. Louis, Mo., $862,890, and Fairbanks-Morse Co., Chicago, Ill., $567,611. The minesweepers were alloted for construction to the Norfolk yard on June 29.

9-Month-Old Boy Dies After Falling In Boiling Water

Nine-month-old Michael Pugh died in Children's Hospital yesterday of burns suffered Monday when he toppled from his crib into a kettle of boiling water.

The child, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Pugh, 6321 Seventh street northwest, had a heavy cold, according to his mother, and she placed an inhaling fluid in the kettle.

While the vapor was rising around the tiny bed, Michael rolled to the edge to watch the bubbling pot and fell into the water.

Mrs. Pugh tried to catch her son before he fell, but was unsuccessful, and the water burned her on the feet and legs.

Pugh is sales manager for the Capital Cadillac Motor Corporation.

Coal Operators Put 'Dollar Before Man,' Jury Is Told

London, Ky., July 27 (AP).—Assistant United States Attorney General Welly K. Hopkins told the Harlan anti-labor conspiracy jury today the indictments were returned because the "coal operators, traveling in unholy company at times, placed the dollar before the man."

Opening the Government's summation in the trial of 39 Harlan coal operators and former peace officers and 17 companies charged with conspiracy to violate the Wagner act, Hopkins said the trouble in Harlan County was "a conflict of human rights against property rights."

The Federal courtroom was jammed as Hopkins started speaking before Judge H. Church Ford.

Robbery Suspect Forfeits Bond by Failure to Appear

Forfeiture of $1,500 bond for the non-appearence of James Curtis, 35, wanted here on two robbery charges, was ordered in District Court yesterday when Assistant United States Attorney John W. Jackson, asked Justice Jesse C. Adkins to declare the bond forfeited.

There had been four continuances in the Curtis case, mainly because his attorneys believed they could locate him and bring him here to trial. He was last ordered to stand trial May 20, 1938, at which date he was reported missing.

According to Jackson's records, Curtis was once convicted of one of the offenses but was granted a new trial.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

"Date Breaking Is Girl's Privilege; No Girl Treats Man Fairly While Chase Is On," Bachelor Is Told.

NOW FOR THE OTHER side of the picture of a young man's "dating experiences with the fair sex in Washington," which, over the signature, "Annoyed Bachelor," he told here Tuesday, July 26, "in the hope that young lady readers may profit from same." With three nights a week to devote to the ladies, he divides his attentions impartially amongst 15 girls, only to find that 13 out of the 15 cannot be depended upon to keep their engagements. "Maybe this will throw some light on the problem of those girls who are forever wailing that they cannot get enough dates to keep them happy," he remarks. But the public reaches its own conclusions—as today's and tomorrow's columns of comment will indicate. M. H.

• • • •

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After reading "annoyed Bachelor's" letter, I suspect I am one of the 13 girls who have turned down his occasional dates. The explanation is simple. I cannot afford to waste my time on a man who is not matrimonially inclined. He is a nice young man and very eligible but it does a girl no good to linger over a bowl of beautiful fruit if she cannot eat it.

• • • •

I have plenty of dates, am 22, and considered pretty. I am definitely not of the debutante variety, which, in this town, reaches the absurd height (or depth) of a common racket. The debs are not even subtle about being sold on the marriage block. They are arrayed like so many Kewpie dolls at a carnival, for the bachelors to view and compare before buying. Most of them are ill adapted to marriage at this stage. They are self-centered, and think only of what they can get out of the game . . . They can't sew, cook, keep house, run a budget and think that by shunning these things they will be forever immunized to the necessity of learning them. The society pages of local newspapers are pages of social want-ads. It's disgusting.

• • • •

Yet all women of my age think in terms of matrimony. It is nature. However, we like a good time along with the preliminaries. I have a good time on my dates. I try to play the game of psychology, seeking the method of attack that will make my date marriage conscious. I sometimes play the role of indifference; sometimes use the Dale Carnegie system of being interested in the man's hobbies and plans; and occasionally use a bit of love making. But the objective is always to awaken in the date the desire to have and to hold.

• • • •

All eligible girls do this, although many will not admit it. When I have come definitely to the conclusion that the armor of the man is not to be pierced, that he is not responsive to the idea, he becomes deadwood so far as I am concerned. I have not come to this conclusion with regard to my "Annoyed Bachelor" yet. But he is slow, for the very good reasons he gives in his letter. My idea now is to keep as many irons in the fire as possible while waiting for his to get hot.

• • • •

Date breaking is a girl's privilege, just as a corollary to changing her mind. Men find more sport shooting game on the fly than on the stand, and the kind of man I want will not pick his mate from a shelf full of debutantes. I do not want a wealthy clothes horse, whose character has been choked by pampering and whose personality has been developed in a tea room.

• • • •

My bachelor friend could be a good shot, but he has forgotten his glasses. Am I to wait like a blinded deer in a nocturnal beam until the hunter returns for me? No. I am not chasing him, nor anyone else—at least, not any more than any girl is—but I am interested and would like to see more of him. I will not, however, allow him to get the erroneous impression that I am on the shelf waiting to be beckoned down.

• • • •

As for the integrity of his two favorites—who never break a date—let me say that integrity is something that no girl possesses as it applies to a suitor or possible suitor. If a girl is constant before she is engaged, it is because she is either dumb, or unattractive, or has lost all sense of sport. She can best reserve her constancy for the period after she has accepted her man. No girl can be trusted to treat a man fairly when the chase is in progress. That is one of the major subjects a girl learns at finishing school, or worse, college. I like your column, Miss Haworth, because it contains not a single germ of originality—just plain horse sense. If only there were more horses——

AVERAGE LOCAL GIRL.

Sandwich at Banquet.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been a constant subscriber to The Post for many years and never miss reading your advice to the "lorn" and forlorn, but not until today has my spirit been roused to address myself to you. While reading the letter from "Annoyed Bachelor" (who needs no advice) the thought came to me, "What fools these mortals be."

• • • •

A picture presented itself to me as follows . . . I see "Annoyed Bachelor" sitting in a dining room. The menu contains 15 delectable and varied dinners. He peruses all of them and then, to the dismay of the beautiful waitress, says: "Bring me a lettuce and tomato sandwich and a glass of pink lemonade. H. M. N.

Mark of Small Man.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: If you ask me, "Annoyed Bachelor," your correspondent of July 26, needs to have the wind taken out of his sails. He is entirely too conceited and seems to feel that a girl should feel highly honored if he asks her for a date. I think his education and position have gone to his head. To begin with, he started off his letter by sounding his own trumpet. Was it necessary to itemize the details of his success?

• • • •

"Readers' Digest" for July has this to say, which "Annoyed Bachelor" might try smoking in his pipe —The doctrine of human equality reposes on this: that there is no man really clever who has not found that he is stupid. There is not a big man who has not felt small. Small men never feel small, but these are the men who really are. SOUTHERN GIRL.

Self Protective Philosophy.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I want to say how right I think you were in your deductions offered at the close of "Annoyed Bachelor's" letter. It is my belief that no girl of 25 (supposing that his woman friends are his own age) is interested in purely friendly relations with men . . . Naturally you can't blame a girl for breaking a date with one man who has no serious intentions if she has an opportunity to go out with another man who is more interested . . . It's not that girls are mercenary, but just that they are interested in living their lives to the best advantage . . . Sincerely yours. JEAN.

Peasant Influence For Daytime and Evening

THE peasant atmosphere holds sway from tennis courts to dining rooms. Below is a smart dinner gown of quilted white flower sprigged chintz jacket, carnival blue poplin skirt. The long full skirt is shirred onto a wide fitted waist band. At left is a two-piece sports outfit of dainty flowered lawn with removable skirt.

Humble Peasants' Costumes Influence Women of Fashion

HUMBLE peasant women now influence fashions to suh an extent that women of fashion are copying their picturesque costumes to wear at all hours of the day.

Made in bright-colored cotton prints, the versatile peasant versions combined old-fashioned qaintness with modern sophistication. There are classic shorts, shirt and skirt outfits for active or spectator sports wear, prints with matching bonnet or hat for daytime wear and gay colored dinner gowns for country dining.

For country club, mountain, country or beach dining, you still may be in the peasant swing in a dinner outfit of quilted white, flowered chintz jacket with a wide carnival-blue poplin skirt shirred onto a wide fitted waist band.

You can travel about all day from tennis court to cottage in a dirndl dress of flower-printed, cotton poplin with a matching bonnet that ties under the chin. Tyrolean embroidery and buttons are authentic peasant trimmings.

If you are a sports enthusiast you still can be peasant-minded in shorts, shirt and skirt outfit. The skirt may be removed for active sports such as tennis, badminton or roving.

Chief characteristics of the peasant styles are brilliant, colored prints in various designs and full skirts made onto shirred, wide fitted waist bands.

Besides being the epitome of chic, the peasant outfits are practical in that they do not fade in sun or rain and are quickly laundered. For this reason, if no other, they are ideal for vacation wardrobes and hard home wear. But remember, only those with small waists and very slender hips are flattered by the peasant styles.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, July 27.

IN ALL the hullabaloo which surrounded the arrival here of Howard "Hummingbird" Hughes, the heart interest was furnished by the invisible Katharine Hepburn, and the comedy relief by their masterful efforts to escape the reporters and the cameramen, who are always cast as villains in Katie's pictures.

ALICE HUGHES

For one who spends most of her life ducking the press "Freckles" shows a lamentable lack of imagination and resource. In fact, it almost makes me doube that she really detests publicity so bitterly. For when she leaves ye old Hartford home for our town, she heads straight for the modest house at 244 East Forty-ninth street, which is just as safe as leaping into a studio floodlight. Every reporter and city editor in Gotham has known that address for years, and the minute Kate is wanted in these parts every alert newspaper sends reporters and photographers to haunt nearby doorways and bars. And good old Katie never fails them—she always turns up, sooner or later, and bolts into the house before the lads can holler a question or waste a plate. It's the cat and the mousehole act.

The day Hughes arrived it was played again. Katie pulled up in a big car. She was wearing a red bandana, a red cape, some shorts and shoes and things. As expected, she saw the boys, whereupon she did the usual nose-dive into the house. The script should be changed. It's corny. Then began the customary mystery comedy, when the newsboys holding the bag filled with rumors of secret phone calls and regular movie meetings. As usual, two people who hate publicity are sure to stir up more than the frantic spotlight drinkers. The cases of Garbo and her Stokie and Hepburn and her Hughsie prove it perfectly—and comically.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The Hughes welcome on Lower Broadway shows that we are still at heart in the great days when every ship brought in a flier, a channel swimmer or a champeen hog-caller who got these hysterical parades and welcomes. This one was as riotous and noisy as Lindbergh's, and the Street Cleaners Union, which has been taking it easy since the horseless carriage came in a few years ago, tells me it swept up 1,800 tons of ticker tape, shredded paper and just plain trash, or nearly as much as is swept out of my house in a month . . .

This Hedy Lamarr, who makes her American film bow in "Algiers," shows every sign of becoming a major panic. She reduced her local male witnesses to thin cold consomme with her remarkable beauty and allure—and now joins Danielle Darrieux as the second overseas cutie to make good in the States during the past six weeks. Daughters of America, look to your laurels and things! . . .

• • • •

The Broadway show list, by the way, has been perspired down to no more than nine and may go lower before the depths of August. "I Married an Angel," the musical piece, is doing a mighty business, and Zorina, the beauteous ballerina, is still the toast of the village—drunk standing up, if able, in anything long and cold and tinkling . . .

• • • •

The other day I snootily said that "swing" was on the wing out, and now Ted Saucier, of the Waldorf, crosses me by saying the big hotel has signed the sainted Benny Goodman and band for the fall season. Oh, well—maybe he'll play "sweet" by then . . . Is there anything real cold in the ice box just now?

Since the cafe-sitters have now gone so languid that backgammon exhausts them, they only find strength to bet on the top debutante of 1938-39. A favorite in the books is this Brenda Frazier, who is a real honey. The other night, at the old Stork Clubbey, she wore a white linen skirt, a white angora cardigan, red leather slippers and no stockings at all. She also wore a self-assured look, common to all odds-on favorites—at least before the race!

When she hides the left-over cake and pie behind the lard can in the refrigerator.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Reducing Was Given Bad Name by Movie Stars of Few Years Ago.

By Ida Jean Kain.

REDUCING got a bad reputation some years ago when the movie stars risked their lives on diets designed solely to make them lose weight. The results were so alarming that some of you still are afraid to reduce because of a possible health penalty.

It is dangerous, of course, to attempt to reduce until you are 10 to 20 pounds under the weight that is normal for you. It is even more dangerous when the diet followed lacks practically everything you need to keep well, and some of the oldtime diets were so fantastic that we wonder how anyone could think them up, let alone persuade anyone else to adopt them!

Balanced Diet.

Some of the sanest people, however, go on the queerest diets! They reason that in order to get thin, the main thing is not to eat. But that is no way to look at it. Don't "go on a diet to reduce." You will do better to leave out of the menus the foods which put on excess weight and which should be restricted are the fuel foods—primarily the fats, sugars and starches.

Your bodily requirement of protein, minerals and vitamins is exactly the same as if you were not trying to reduce. You must have a balanced diet, with all the foods needed for the maintenance of vitality and the repair of body tissues. These are really "protective" foods and your health does not suffer on daily reducing menus consisting of lean meat, eggs, skim milk or buttermilk, fresh fruits and vegetables and a restricted amount of whole grain bread and butter.

In dieting, exercise is just as important as low calorie menus.

Those are the foods that keep you healthy and you need every one of them. Unless your diet supplies the food elements to make good the daily wear and tear, these elements are taken from the body's vital tissues, and your well being is seriously endangered.

Now, can't you see how important it is that your reducing program be carefully planned? You should feel and look better than ever for your reducing, and you can if you follow a balanced diet with weight loss limited to 2 pounds per week, and do not try to reduce below normal weight.

It is no favor to your health to continue dragging around 40 to 50 pounds of excess weight, but do be a little cautious about your reducing program. Before you adopt any diet ask yourself, "Do these menus contain everything I need for health?"

Balanced Diet Is Factor in Keeping Healthy While Losing Weight.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

New Way of Examining Heart Is Demonstrated

One of the most astonishing things demonstrated at the meeting of the American Medical Association, to my mind, was the new method of examining the heart with the X-ray. A dye is put into the blood stream which shows up in the heart so that the different chambers of the heart and even the valves can be seen. This idea of using selective dyes has been developed by the X-ray men with great industry in the last few years. It is truly uncanny to think that a special chemical can be swallowed which will appear only in the liver and cast a shadow on the X-ray plate. They have substances to outline the lungs, and the kidneys and, of course, the stomach and intestines are old stuff. Now the heart! The X-ray man is taking over the entire body.

The work of the Medical Milk Commissioners is an important contribution to the public weal. They meet annually, and this year the most striking development in their discussions was the test in calfhood for the germ of undulant fever.

Undulant fever—brucelliasis to the Medical Milk Commissioners—is an ever-present health danger all over this continent, and any method that will detect its presence early in the herd will be immediately useful. It means that calf can be separated from the herd, thus stopping one source of the spread of the infection.

Undulant fever occurs in milk cows and can be transmitted in the milk to man. It is a very chronic fever, sometimes lasting a year. Chronic forms are found. One case was of a dairyman who felt all run down, went to a number of doctors who made various diagnoses of heart trouble (myocarditis), etc., until at last one of them, because he was a dairyman, decided to try him on undulant fever vaccine, on which he promptly cleared up.

Mrs. Cary T. Grayson Plans Saratoga Stay

Notables Will Head for New York Resort From Now Until the End of August; Mrs. Jack Skinner to Join Husband, Then Make Trip.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Saratoga has run away with the social as well as the sporting spotlight, and from now until the end of August no end of notables will head toward the New York resort that the Whitneys and Vanderbilts in recent years have kept on the map in a big way.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Mrs. Cary T. Grayson and her sons, Jordon, Cary T., jr., and William, who left here early in the spring for their home near Upperville, Va., will go to Saratoga for several days next month. They plan to be there for the yearling sales when ten thoroughbreds from the breeding establishment of the late Admiral Cary T. Grayson will be put on the block. The Grayson consignment is scheduled to be sold the night of August 16. Mrs. Grayson and her sons recently returned to their Upperville farm after spending a week at the Cavalier Hotel in Virginia Beach.

It looks as if just about everyone from the hunting country will hit Saratoga before the races are over. Mrs. Jack Skinner left her Middleburg home on Tuesday for Plymouth, Mass., where she will visit her mother, Mrs. Anne Barbour, until August 10. Then she will join Mr. Skinner in New York and they will go to the resort for a week as guest sof George Bull, president of the Saratoga Racing Association.

Mrs. Harry McComb Bangs, of New York and Middleburg, is spending the month of August as a guest of Mr. Bull and will act as hostess at the series of house parties he will give during the season. Mr. Bangs will join her after the first week in August and will spend several weeks at the Spa. Mr. Bull will have among his guests next month Mrs. Ivan Marty, the former Elizabeth Tabb, of Middleburg; William Hitt, of Washington and Middleburg; Carter Bowie and Hal Parr, of Baltimore.

Other prominent Virginians who will go to Saratoga soon are Mr. and Mrs. John R. Buchanan, Miss Louise Gade and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur White and the latter's daughter, Miss Bettina Belmont. Mr. and Mrs. William Street and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Friendly, of Warrenton, already have taken a house there for the season, and so have Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Fontaine, of Upperville. Mr. Fontaine is trainer for Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane.

Royal Couple Comes and Goes—Without Fanfare

Washington, with its flair for feteing visiting titles ,didn't get so much as a chance to curtsy to the latest royal couple visiting here. Unheralded and unsung, Prince and Princess Dominique Radziwill arrived early Tuesday morning . . . called at the Greek Legation . . . took a sight-seeing tour . . . and then quietly left for New York late in the afternoon.

In keeping with their wishes, they came and went without fanfare. There was a quiet luncheon at the Greek Legation, with Counsellor Nicholas Lely hosting in the absence of the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, who is still on vacation; but there was no special party and no one was invited in to meet the couple. When news of the visit leaked out yesterday, Capital society—what there is left of it in town—figuratively tore its hair and gnashed its teeth because royalty, and such attractive royalty at that, arrived and departed without giving anyone a chance to bend the knee and bow low . . .

Before her marriage Princess Radziwill was Princess Eugenie of Greece. She is the daughter of Prince George, uncle of King George II, and of Princess Marie Bonaparte. She is a first cousin of the Duchess of Kent, and away back in the days when the former King Edward of England was Prince of Wales there was frequent reference to her as his chief "heart interest." Other first cousins are Princess Nina of Russia and Princess Paul Chavchavadze, who lives in New York.

Related to Polish Envoy, Count Jerzy Potocki

Almost every house in Central Europe is tied up with Prince Dominique's family. His mother, who died three years ago, was Archduchess Renee-Marie of Austria. So far as that goes, Prince Dominique and his bride are related to each other. His grandmother and her's were both members of the famous Blanc family that controlled Monte Carlo for so many years. The Prince also is related to the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, whose mother was Princess Betka Radziwill.

Both still in their twenties, the Prince and Princess are reported to be extremely good looking. Arriving in New York early last month, they were entertained at luncheon by Mrs. Vincent Astor in Manhattan, and then took off to Newport to visit Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Holmsen. Later, they went out to the West Coast, recently returning from there to New York by way of Washington. They are now at the St. Regis Hotel and will leave there today to sail on the Ile de France for their home in Paris. They expect to visit this country again next year, coming especially to attend the World's Fair.

The wedding will take place at noon in Mrs. Curtis' apartment at Hampshire House in New York City.

Mrs. Curtis, whom Capital society has taken to its heart since she made her debut here, at one time was mentioned for District Commissioner. Wedding to Be Simple Affair

The wedding Friday will be devoid of pomp and will be witnessed only by the family and a few close friends. Among those who will be present will be Mrs. Curtis' four children, Mrs. George H. Bostwick, of Westbury, Long Island, the former Miss Laura E. Curtis; James Freeman Curtis, jr., of Rosslyn, Long Island, and Miss Pauline Curtis and Frazier Curtis, both of Washington. Wheelwright, of Boston, sister of Mrs. Curtis, and Mrs. Wallach Merriam.

Mrs. Curtis received her divorce from James Freeman Curtis, New York attorney, in January of this year. This marked their second separation, for after a similar decree in April, 1924, she and Mr. Curtis were remarried in Washington 13 months later.

Mrs. Hull Named President Of Wilson Birthplace Society

Carter Glass and Harry F. Byrd Also Heads of Foundation Seeking to Make National Shrine of 'The Manse' in Staunton.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, has just been named president of the Woodrow Wilson Birthplace Foundation which soon will purchase the War President's home in Staunton, Va. Serving with her as vice presidents are the two Virginia Senators, Carter Glass and Harry Flood Bird.

By becoming head of the foundation, Mrs. Hull joins the large group of Washington women interested in restoring and preserving the historic homes of the Old Dominion, chief among whom are those in charge of the preservation of Stratford Hall, ancestral estate of the Lees.

The Manse, as the gracious, white-columned house is called, has been open to visitors for several years under auspices of Mary Baldwin College and the gardens were restored in 1933 by the Garden Club of Virginia.

Woodrow Wilson was born there on December 28, 1865, at the time that his father, Joseph R. Wilson, was serving as pastor of the Staunton First Presbyterian Church. While his parents moved away shortly thereafter, he always referred to Staunton as his home and frequently returned there on visits while his sisters were students at Mary Baldwin College.

Mrs. Hull, herself a native Virginian, is naturally interested in making a national shrine of the home of one of Virginia's most famous statesmen.

The foundation will be governed by not less than 15 or more than 21 trustees and will have its headquarters at Staunton. A number of prominent men and women, many of whom are Virginians, are listed as trustees.

Leaders Set For Parley Of W.C.T.U.

Mrs. Ramsey Is Head of Group Going to San Francisco.

Mrs. Hoge, Miss Brystone, Mrs. Weech Also to Start Tomorrow.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Ida W. Ramsey, State president of the District of Columbia Women's Christian Temperance Union, leaves tomorrow with a group of other members from the District and Virginia, to attend the sixty-third national convention in San Francisco, August 4 to 10. She will represent the District organization, of which she has been president for three years and is nominee for a fourth term.

Others in the party going from here will be Dr. Izora Scott, of Washington, national director of legislation; Mrs. Sarah H. Hoge, of Lincoln, Va., Virginia State president; Miss Clara Blystone and Mrs. Amy Weech. Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse, with her family, has left for a motor trip to the Pacific Coast, and will also attend the convention.

The 26 unions in the District of Columbia have been working in line with the program of the national organization for the past four years to help raise the million-dollar fund for temperance education. It is planned to complete the money-raising campaign by next year in celebration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Frances E. Willard, founder of the W. C. T. U.

District Quota Is Almost Raised

The District has already contributed more than $4,500 of its $5,000 quota. Much of this has been done by means of life memberships and memorials given by the various unions, serving the dual purpose of honoring members of long service and increasing the fund. Each life membership conferred or memorial gift made adds a $25 contribution.

The 26 unions in Washington include two Iota Sigma groups, composed of young women. They also sponsor a youth council and the Loyal Temperance Union, with a membership of 500 children. The young members are given temperance education and have presented skits on several occasions at W. C. T U. meetings, illustrating their application of the instruction they have received. Mrs. Iva B. Stout is chairman of the Temperance Legion work.

The local W. C. T. U. has been responsible for the signs in street cars reading: "Drinking Plus Driving Equals Disaster," and plans to extend its work in temperance education, approaching it from the angles of both safety and health.

Local Unions Have Active Programs

The individual unions in various parts of the city have regular meetings in addition to the monthly sessions of the District organization which will be resumed in the fall.

Presidents of the 26 local unions follow: Mrs. Edna E. Rankin, of Anacostia Union; Miss Charlotte Pound, Brookland Union; Mrs. J. L. Bixler, Capitol Hill; Miss Clara Blystone, Central Iota Sigma; Mrs. Darrington Richardson, Chapin Union; Mrs. Henry Febno Sawtelle, Chevy Chase Union; Mrs. Thomas B. Jarvis, Cleveland Park; Mrs. Belle Cutler Parker, Columbia; Mrs. Franklin Adams, Eckington Union; Mrs. Jessie G. Elker, of Emma Sanford Shelton Union; Mrs. James W. Powell, of Frances E. Willard Union; Mrs. Lena J. Stabler, Georgetown; Mrs. F. H. Stevens, Gospel Mission; Mrs. Elizabeth L. Newburgh, Kalorama Heights.

Mrs. James W. Tabler, of Myra Pollock Union; Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, Mount Pleasant Union; Mrs. Mary E. Arnold, of North Capitol; Mrs. Marie N. Brinley, of North Star Union; Mrs. R. E. S. Boss, Northeast Suburban Union; Mrs. Clyde J. Crouch, Northwest Union; Mrs. Lillian Gear, Potomac Palisades; Mrs. Ramsey, of Shepard Park Union; Mrs. M. A. Bradburn, Star of the East; Mrs. Stella Clayton, of the Stella Clayton Union, which is named for her; Mrs. Harry I. Houston, of Takoma Park Union; Mrs. George M. Beckett, West End Union.

Bright Flowers Bloom Willingly In Alley Windows

Women from the various denominations interested in the alley window box project undertaken this summer by the Woman's Council, yesterday made a tour of some of the alleys where flowers and boxes have been provided.

Catholic Group Meets Tuesday

Court District of Columbia, Catholic Daughters of America, at its regular business meeting at the Willard Hotel Tuesday night will plan its August activities. Miss Josephine Walsh, the grand regent, will preside.

The Catholic Daughter scholarship, given by Court District of Columbia, has been awarded to Miss Mildred Fraser, of 1850 Kalorama road northwest, for the coming year at the National School of Catholic Service, 2400 Nineteenth street northwest. Miss Fraser is a member of the court.

Church Leader In Visit Here

Mrs. William J. Buhmann, president of the Woman's Council of Houston Federation of Churches, stopped for a day in Washington on her way to her home in Texas. She came here from New York, where she spent some time following the convention of the National Council of Church Women in Ohio, at which she was one of the speakers.

"There is a growing organic and spiritual unity throughout the world," said Mrs. Buhmann, who is ardently in favor of co-operation among the churches, "but the lack of doing things together withholds the spiritual advance. We talk a great deal about Christian unity and world peace, but how can we hope for world peace when we professing Christians do not have denominational peace nor racial tolerance—not even family peace."

Mrs. Buhmann demonstrated her belief in the value of one group's contribution to another in taking notes on the work being done by the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches in its alley projects and Juvenile Court program.

In Houston, the church women, like those in Washington, have used their influence to better local conditions. They were, in a large measure, responsible for the appointment of a woman as matron for the Texas Woman's Prison, which had previously been directed entirely by men. Investigation of conditions was carried on under the law and legislation department with the co-operation of the Houston newspapers.

The council makes its influence felt in the political situation to the extent of sending questionnaires to candidates to determine their stand on issues important to the city and State, and posting their answers on the bulletin boards at each church, so as to acquaint the members with their position.

Mrs. Buhmann expressed her interest in the program of the national convention she attended, but feels the greatest value of such a meeting comes from the exchange of printed ideas among the groups represented.

Credit Women Plan Meetings

The local branch of the Credit Women's Breakfast Clubs of North America, one of the youngest of the women's organizations in Washington, is continuing its regular meetings during the summer. The branch was organized only last March and now has 48 members, representing credit and collection departments in 33 local retail stores.

Miss Wilhelmina Gude is president; Miss Martha M. Bean, vice president; Miss Mary Hodan, treasurer; Miss Ruth Adams, corresponding secretary; Miss Alice White, recording secretary. Miss Ruth Beuchert is chairman of the entertainment committee; Mrs. Katherine Cohen, chairman of the membership committee; Miss Francis Rowe, chairman of the ways and means committee, and Mrs. Alice Underwood, of the educational committee.

Meetings of the club are held in the Fairfax room of the Willard Hotel every third Thursday in the month. Programs of an educational and instructive nature will be planned for the coming season. The club aims to promote a better understanding of credit in Washington and to familiarize members with its practices and procedure.

The first Credit Women's Breakfast Club was organized in Portland, Oreg., in 1930, and the organization became international in 1937. Since that time the movement has gained widespread interest among credit women and many new clubs have been formed. The national convention was held in Pittsburgh last month and was attended by Miss Martha Bean, as delegate from the Washington club.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Not in Vain.

Those lives are never lived in vain
From which their fellow creatures gain—
Old Mother Nature.

So it is that the humblest of lives, lives that seem of no importance whatever save to themselves, may not have been lived in vain. The greatest single force in the world is influence. It may be for good. It may be for evil. In either event may be felt far and wide and affect the lives of many people. And the ones who exert that influence may live and die without ever knowing that they have not lived in vain. You see after all one who lives for and to himself alone does live in vain.

A few days after poor Crippy, the three-legged Coon who for two years had been queen in Aunt Sally's Woodhouse Night Club, had been brought back from the hospital where she had been taken when struck by a motor truck, she died. She had had the very best of care and she had done her part. She had eaten well and slept well, but from the time she had been struck she had never been able to stand on her feet. Her spine had been injured.

Tommy, Sue and Sammy were three sober young folk after Aunt Sally had phoned the sad news. "I keep thinking of her as I saw her last summer sitting up in Aunt Sally's lap and feeding herself so daintily with her one hand," said Sue.

Tommy nodded. "I do, too," said he. "If I hadn't been against steel traps before I saw her the first time I would have been afterward. I hate to think what she must have suffered when the jaws of that trap snapped on her leg, and afterward when she tore or cut herself free. If I don't do anything else worth while I'm going to do what I can as long as I live to put an end to the use of cruel traps."

"Me, too," said Sammy. "I used to think I wanted a Coon-skin coat, but I don't any more."

"It is queer how many people seem to think that animals and birds haven't any feelings," continued Tommy. "They'll run over things on the road and not even stop to see if they have killed the poor things, and half the time they haven't and the victims are just left to suffer and slowly die. If that truck driver who hit poor Crippy had been the kind of man some drivers are he would have left her there beside the road to suffer. But he hustled her to the animal hospital, and that was all he could do."

"Poor Crippy. If she had had

"It is queer how many people seem to think that animals and birds haven't any feelings," continued Tommy.

four legs perhaps this wouldn't have happened," said Sue.

"Perhaps not," agreed Tommy. "Anyway she didn't live in vain. A lot of people know about her and are not going to forget her. They are going to work against cruel trapping, just as we are, and they are going to be more careful when driving. Aunt Sally said that Crippy is buried in the big sandbank under a pine tree across from her house, but I kind of like to think that she is still alive even though she is dead, if you get what I mean."

Sammy nodded. "We do," said he. "You mean her influence is going to be felt even though she is dead."

"That's it," agreed Tommy. "It may be, and I believe it will be, that some other little people in fur will have less cause to suffer because of her. We'll tell a lot of people her story and they'll tell it to a lot of other people, and so it will spread and make people think. That's what people need—to be made to think."

"Anyway, she left a lot of children, and a mother who does that hasn't lived in vain," said Sue.

"That's true," agreed Tommy. "We know that in the last two years nine children lived to grow up. How many more she had raised before Aunt Sally became acquainted with her there is no way of knowing. You see she wasn't a young coon. Probably she had had several families. No, it can't be said any way you look at it that Crippy lived in vain."

Tommy was right. Crippy's influence is still alive and will be for a long time, for Crippy was a real Coon, just as Aunt Sally is a real person and the Woodhouse Night Club is a reality. The events of these last few stories all really happened just a few weeks ago. Crippy is dead, but whenever I look at the splendid photograph of her in Aunt Sally's lap that I made last summer I know that the spirit of mercy and kindness is the stronger because of her, and that she did not live in vain.

Court Backing of Federal Group Health Plan Spurs Drive for Membership

GHA

as charged by District Attorney David A. Pine and J. Balch Moor, District superintendent of insurance, the decision gives the association the following advantages:

1. Legal standing.
2. Assures Government workers who wanted to join GHA, but were held back by the "outlaw" accusations, that the organization is within the law. At present there are about 2,500 members, all on Federal payrolls, here.
3. Eliminates the excuse offered by many of the District hospitals, in refusing GHA staff physicians courtesy privileges, namely, that their facilities could not be made available to an organization whose legal status was in question.

The decision, which had not been expected before September, also is expected to facilitate acquisition of a hospital site. Because all of the local hospitals bar its staff doctors, GHA is planning to build its own.

At a hearing Monday night before the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners on an application to operate a hospital in Chevy Chase, Md., counsel for the county medical society urged the commissioners to defer action pending a decision on the association's legality. Subsequently the application was rejected, after 15 residents argued against it.

Whether an appeal will be taken by the Government is still undecided. Pine immediately reported the court's action to superiors in the Department of Justice, but as one of them said last night:

"This case is too important for any snap judgment. Whether there is to be an appeal will be left up to the Solicitor General."

In his decision, climaxing nearly a year's controversy over Group Health Association, Justice Bailey said:

"I see no reason why an individual may not, without violating the statute, contract with a physician for medical services for a stipulated period for a fixed compensation; and it would seem that a group of individuals might make the same arrangement with a group of physicians."

Representing the Group Health Association in the successful litigation were Attorneys Arthur Blain York and Ernest K. Newmann, of the legal department of the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

Through its weekly Journal, the American Medical Association launched a bitter attack specifically against Group Health Association even before the clinic at 1328 I street northwest was opened last November.

Charges were G. H. A. is a corporation practicising medicine—contrary to law—and that it is in violation of District insurance laws.

Dr. William J. Mallory, president, and other leaders of the District Medical Society, which has fought G. H. A., declined to comment last night on the decision.

Following the decision Kirkpatrick made no attempt to conceal his jubilation.

"This decision," he said, "confirms our contention from the beginning that we were operating in entire accordance with the law. It removes one of the main barriers that has stood in our way and, we hope, will result in a more favorable attitude in regard to our efforts to utilize the facilities of the hospitals in the District and of the organized medical profession.

"In the meantime, we shall continue our efforts to obtain our own hospital."

A corporation which, like GHA, is non-profit making and offers mutual benefits "is, in my opinion, not engaged in the practice of medicine or in holding itself out as doing so," Justice Bailey stated.

"It is true that a corporation can act only through its agents and employes but the physicians with whom the plaintiff (GHA) makes contracts are rather in the position of independent contractors and the plaintiff does not in any way undertake to control the manner in which they attend or prescribe for their patients."

Court action was instituted by Group Health Association several months ago under the declaratory judgment law, following warnings by District Attorney Pine and Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal that compulsory dissolution of the enterprise would be sought if operations were not suspended.

Seal was out of the city yesterday and unavailable for comment on the decision.

The court held GHA does not violate the healing arts practice act, whose purpose is to protect residents against quackery. Justice Bailey was similarly convinced the insurance statute has not been violated, emphasizing the association pays no indemnities in money but offers only services in exchange for fee payments.

The District Court decision establishing the legality of the Group Health Association was greeted with cheers by association representatives (above). William C. Kirkpatrick, association president, holds a report which recommends enlargement of the association.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Washington, July 28, 1938.

One of the strict taboos in the Capital is against second helpings at dinner parties. All the frostiest high-bosomed authorities on etiquette agree on that. One reason is that the gilt-edged dinners must be run off on schedule, without dawdling.

Buzzie Dall
. . . stop for pop

* * * *

But President Roosevelt himself flouts this taboo. When his appetite is good (and it usually is) and he likes a dish, he asks for more, or even a third helping. To him Emily Post is just a lost oracle of the horse and buggy, or spoon-holder, era.

* * * *

Normally, the President's influence would be enough to embolden lesser people with appetites to impale another breast of chicken the second time the platter goes around . . . even with the hostess' bosom heaving . . . but it happens that Washington society is pretty much a dissident stronghold, to which even Mr. Roosevelt's good appetite is revolutionary . . . So guests' plates are snatched away before they've dissected their first helping, and home they go to raid the icebox.

"—wait for Der Tag's dawning"

Another nightmare has arisen to harass nervous Washingtonians. The story is going the rounds that on certain ranches in neighboring lands, Japanese and Nazi airplanes have been imported, disguised as farm implements and household goods, and set up to await Der Tag's next dawning.

* * * *

There they stand concealed in haystacks or sheds, thinly disguised as tractors or harvester combines, ready to assemble in squadrons at the zero hour and bomb the daylights out of Fort Worth, Tex., or Grand Rapids, Mich. And if you believe such tales you're as goofy as those who think they're completely preposterous.

* * * *

On one solemn occasion years ago, when Lord Robert Cecil was submitting tolerantly to an interview about the League of Nations in the Fifth Avenue home of a great banker, an enterprising tabloid reporter got the drop on the more serious pundits and asked him, as the first question!

"Will the Prince of Wales marry an American Girl?"

* * * *

This chagrined the pundits, who in preparation had read the League covenant clear through, no end. There was even talk of ducking the reporter in the Central Park reservoir.

But the fact remains that if Lord Robert had merely answered "Yes" to the question, he might have gone down in history as a great prophet.

As it is, there's some doubt whether he'll go down in history.

"—Sistie and Buzzie were missed"

When the President goes motoring, elderly veterans in his caravan of ten find it trying to drive for hours on end without any stop for refreshment and relaxation; the pace is strenuous, the flesh is weak. But on they must go, pell-mell and willy-nilly.

* * * *

On the last great cross-country motorcade, one member of the Presidential entourage grew more and more impatient; it seemed that lunch-time would never come. Finally he could endure his pangs no longer.

"Gad!" he said. "I wish Sistie and Buzzie were along; when they're with us at least we stop occasionally, if only for a bottle of pop."

* * * *

MIDSUMMER MEDLEY. Some of the best American parties in Washington this summer are being paid for (so the guests whisper) with German, Spanish or Italian money . . . Some officials are annoyed at Hugo Eckener's reiterated vociferations that President Roosevelt would like to override Ickes and sell the Nazis some helium; others just laugh out loud . . . The silly season is upon us; a hostess tempted her guests the other evening with hot dogs stuffed with caviar.

Senate Marine Group Elects Bailey Leader

The Senate committee ordered to investigate labor conditions in the merchant marine yesterday chose Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, to succeed the late Senator Copeland, of New York as its chairman.

The committee, created by the last Congress, was given $20,000 to conduct a thorough study of complaints that subversive influences are at work among maritime laborers. Other committee members are Senators Thomas (Democrat), of Utah; Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio; Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, and Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan.

Eating Her Way to Health at Camp

This scene is typical of ones at camps to which The Post Camp Fund will send children to give them an opportunity to eat their way to health and happiness via well-balanced meals.

Vacation Fate of 100 Children Will Be Decided on Monday

$32 Donation Sends Fund Total for Needy to $538.90.

Fate of 100 Washington children—every one of them in urgent need of country air and sunshine—will be decided Monday when the camp scholarship committee selects those to be given two weeks' real vacation in a summer cmap.

The number of boys and girls who will be taken from the broiling streets of Washington for 14 golden days depends entirely on the amount of money readers of The Washington Post make available to the committee.

Yesterday's total climbed by $32 to $538.90, which represents two weeks in camp for 38 children. One dollar equals one day; it only costs $14 to give a youngster 14 days of carefree life. And experts say benefits of camp are hardly absorbed in less than a fortnight.

Members of the committee, representing various Washington social agencies, include Mrs. Mary Thompson, Miss Marie McCormick, Mrs. J. C. Rogers, Mrs. Lawrence Koenigsberger and Mrs. Grace Fry.

The fund is stretched by partial contributions of parents or relatives of the children. Unable to pay the entire $14, they give $5 or $10 or whatever they can afford. In a recent case, the aunt of two little girls who have lived the entire winter in one dismal room paid $15 to send them to camp. The remaining $13 must be made up in some way.

Contributions may be sent by mail to The Post camp fund editor or delivered in person to the cashier's office on the ground floor of The Post Building.

The post fund has already fully provided for 38 boys and girls; at least 60 more are in immediate need of camp. If you want to know why, read the story of ten of these children:

A drunken father is responsible for the misery that pervades the Allen home. Social workers were puzzled by the expression of fear on the faces of his five sons and daughters. They learned drink makes him abusive, and that the innocent victims of his wrath are the children, who range from 2 to 11 years of age.

Because of his drinking, Allen cannot hold a job and his wife must work to support them. Her job keeps her away from home and makes it impossible for her to protect the children. The children are undernourished and unkempt from lack of maternal care, besides being frightened and repressed by paternal abuse. The answer, social workers believe, is two weeks of camp to restore their health and powers of resistance.

Tuition at camp will cost each $14, a sum which none of them can pay.

Twelve-year-old May's mother suffers from a peculiar mental condition which has ruined her own life and threatens to spoil that of her daughter. She has become so inhibited and afraid of meeting other people that she refuses to leave her home. The situation has become acute recently because of May's ill health and her urgent need of medical care. Her mother refuses to accompany her to a clinic—yet won't allow her to go alone. Of above-average mentality, May has become timid and quiet. Close association with other children in a wholesome, normal community will save her from suffering as her mother does.

Arthur, 14, is the victim of his abnormal height. Because he looks older than his age, he always has associated with older boys. Wishing to impress them, he gets himself involved in scrapes from which his good judgment normally would protect him. Deserted by his father, he lives on the $5 weekly wage which his mother receives as a domestic. She lacks the time and ability to train him, and cannot afford to send him to camp. Two weeks with boys of his own age would build up a circle of friends whose regard for him would not be based on his capacity for mischief.

The three White children, whose ages range from 9 to 13, need a new environment because of the low moral plane of their home. Their mother, abandoned by her husband, has lived with a succession of different men during the last few years. Their home, situated in one of Washington's most notorious alleys, is a rendezvous for all the derelicts who haunt the neighborhood. Camp would teach these children the clean and orderly life they have never known.

Contributions received yesterday were as follows:

Mrs. John C. Donnally	$5.00
The Drs. Baird	5.00
H. W. C.	5.00
Anonymous	10.00
Edward Henkel	5.00
In Memory of Betty	2.00
Yesterday's total	$32.00
Previously acknowledged	$506.90
Total to date	$538.90

This is the ninth of a series of articles outlining the needs of 100 underprivileged children whom local agencies have recommended for two weeks at camp and for whom The Post is raising a camp fund. The tenth will appear tomorrow.

Nation-Wide System of Lawyer 'Internes' Forecast Before Guild's Student Auxiliary

Establishment of an "interneship" for young lawyers, comparable to the system now in operation in the medical profession, was forecast last night by Samuel Herman, attorney with the Department of Agriculture, as he addressed the first meeting of the Students' Auxiliary of the National Lawyers Guild.

Speaking before almost 500 young men and women who are law students in colleges in the District, Herman contrasted the plight of the law school graduate, who enters a crowded field without experience or sure source of income, with that of the medical graduate, who is given the benefit of hospital training before "putting out his shingle."

"The burden of helping graduates adjust themselves and get started in the various legal fields should be borne at least partially by the profession," Herman, a youthful Chicagoan who is active in the Lawyers' Guild, asserted.

Affiliated with the District chapter of the Lawyers Guild, the auxiliary is the first of its kind in the Nation. The guild hopes to extend it wherever there are chapters of the guild.

Details by which "interneships" might be worked out will be taken up later, Herman indicated. The movement, however, is expected to become Nation wide. Already 275 members have been enrolled among students in principal law schools of the city.

Idea for the auxiliary was conceived by Herman and Simon Stickgold, a Treasury Department attorney, both members of the guild. Temporary chairman of last night's meeting was Chandler Redman, George Washington University sophomore.

Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of antitrust law, addressed the auxiliary on "The Law as an Argumentative Technique."

Wage Board Calls Inquiry On Cafe Pay

'Chiseling' Is Charged to Proprietors of Restaurants.

Complaints of "chiseling" by restaurant proprietors in the payment of the $13.25 a week minimum wage to waitresses caused the District Minimum Wage Board yesterday to order a sweeping investigation and to threaten to reopen the entire case.

Waitresses have complained to the board their employers are deducting for three meals a day although their hours are such that they cannot eat more than two meals.

The Hotel and Restaurant Employe Alliance also charges some waitresses are being compelled to "kick-back" part of their minimum pay.

Another factor which is disturbing the board, although not due to any fault of the employers, is that tips have been found to be far below the standards reported during hearings on the restaurant industry's wages.

At that time employers talked of tips that amounted to as much as $25 per week per waitress, in some instances, the board took this into consideration in fixing the $13.25 minimum wage.

Recent investigations and complaints, however, indicate that either tips have fallen off substantially since the minimum wage was established or that earlier reports were grossly exaggerated or both.

Miss Gwynn Geach, secretary of the board, expressed the opinion publicity given to the heavy tipping has had a reaction that has caused patrons to cut down on their tips.

One waitress reported she got a 5-cent tip one day and a 10-cent tip the second.

Civil Service Agent Ralph Bowman Is Dead at Age of 68

Ralph Bowman, 68, investigator for the Civil Service Commission, died of a heart attack yesterday while driving his car on Eighth street near H northwest. He lived at 4424 Q street northwest.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest.

Mr. Bowman was born in Batavia, N. Y. After working in Buffalo he became connected with the bureau of municipal research in New York City. Subsequently, he was chief of the bureau of municipal research in Milwaukee and in Philadelphia.

Shortly after the close of the World War, Mr. Bowman was named a bureau chief in the Emergency Fleet Corporation of the United States Shipping Board. In 1924, he entered the United States Bureau of Efficiency, remaining with that agency until 1932, when he became an investigator for the personnel classification division of the Civil Service Commission.

Mr. Bowman was a member of the Sons of the American Revolution. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mabel Hall Bowman; two daughters, Mrs. J. Y. Christmas, of near Upper Marlboro, Md., and Miss Olive L. Bowman, of Washington, and a son, Kimberly Bowman, assistant in the reading room of the Library of Congress.

Would-Be Leaper Does Dive — But Just Into Skylight

An excited voice came over the telephone at fire alarm headquarters at 11:15 last night.

"You'd better send somebody up here to 1309 W street quick, because I'm going to jump from the roof."

Before fire apparatus could reach the address, Sergt. William Hinson and Patrolman Jesse Smith had been attracted there by a crowd in W street, which stood gaping at a man perched on top of the three-story building.

Hinson and Smith had visions of a small-scale repetition of the 17-story suicide leap of John W. Warde in New York Tuesday. They dashed inside the building.

The man on the roof saw them coming. Instead of jumping to the street, he attempted to escape by crashing through a skylight. He landed almost at the feet of Smith, who had just reached the top of the third-floor stairs.

Taken to the Second Precinct Station he gave his name as Lawrence H. Miller, 21, colored, of 1309 W street northwest. He was sent to Gallinger Hospital for observation.

President Due To Appear at Bridge Rites

Gov. Price, Other Officials to Help Open Va. Side of Memorial.

President Roosevelt, Secretary Ickes and Gov. Price of Virginia will join officials of the National Park Service, the Park and Planning Commission and the Commission of Fine Arts when the Virginia Approach to Arlington Memorial Bridge is opened with impressive ceremonies September 1.

Tentative plans, as announced last night, call for an address by Mr. Roosevelt, probably on the East Plaza of the Capitol, which will be broadcast throughout the Nation. Ickes and Price also are expected to speak.

Then, according to arrangements, the President and Governor will lead a motorcade, starting at the Senate Office Building, along Constitution avenue to the Memorial Bridge, across the bridge, along the Lee Memorial boulevard to the north end of Columbia Island, then across the boundary between the District and Virginia.

The ceremony of removing the barrier on the boundary line will follow, with Price and his official staff, the Congressional delegation from Virginia, the State Highway Commission and the State Conservation and Development Commission taking their places on the Virginia side, and the President and Government officials remaining on the District side.

The Governor will speak, then snip the gray ribbon. The scissors will then be handed the President, who will cut the blue ribbon, throwing the bridge open to traffic. The motorcade then will proceed over Lee Memorial boulevard to Fort Myer.

Shenandoah Mock War 'Loss' Heavy

Front Royal, Va., July 27.—'d the rumbling of thunder dow... ne valley of the Shenandoah, simulating war, the Blue army, commanded by Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Twenty-ninth Division, today suffered serious losses in an attack launched by the heavily reinforced enemy, Red army. The command post exercises of the division, participated in by troops and officers from Maryland, Pennsylvania, the District and Virginia, were resumed this morning after a one-day recess.

Heavy casualties were sustained by the First Maryland Infantry when the Reds enveloped their left flank, just north of Winchester, Va. The Reds, of course, are imaginary, as are the many dead men, but as far as the 400 officers and men camped near Front Royal, Va., are concerned, a war is being fought, even though it is on paper. The staff will go out into the field again tomorrow.

A bit of humor entered into the maneuvers when it was found necessary to guard field communication wires against hogs and cows found chewing at the connections.

Medical officers, mainly District men, were guests tonight of the Twenty-ninth Military Police Company at a chicken dinner. Tomorrow evening, following a spaghetti dinner, District officers will be hosts at a cocktail party on the lawn of the camp grounds.

'Moving Day' Due at District Building Soon

Hazen, Allen May Have to Give Up Rooms for Project-Planners.

The District Building is getting ready for moving day in preparation for a heavy building program, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen disclosed yesterday.

The Minimum Wage Board and Clifford Lanham, superintendent of trees and parking, and his staff are to be moved to the old Police Court Building from the fifth and basement floors, respectively.

Both Commissioner Hazen and Commissioner George E. Allen probably will give up auxiliary rooms they now use for a corps of architects and draftsmen who will draw plans for the two courthouses and hospital addition for which PWA funds have been allocated, and other building projects carried in the 1939 supply act.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board probably will be called upon to relinquish its hearing room also if more room is needed.

The District engineer department will have to work fast on plans for the three PWA projects already approved by Secretary Ickes as construction must be underway by the beginning of 1939.

Boomerang Faces Large Taxi Firms

Two Groups Ready to Sell Own Policies to Cab Drivers.

By James D. Secrest.

Washington taxicab operators indicated yesterday they would subscribe to outright liability insurance policies instead of filing bonds or setting up cash deposits as they generally approved the $21-a-month rate fixed by Insurance Superintendent J. Balch Moor.

While some of the larger associations had reached no decisions, reports were current that the Independent Taxi Owners' Association, which operates 1,200 Diamond cabs, and the Blue-Light Cab Association were preparing to form mutual companies for the purpose of selling policies to their own members and any other interested cab operator.

Indications were that the insurance act might prove a boomerang to the associations that sponsored it with the aim of squeezing out independents.

Associations Dismayed.

Most of the smaller cab associations, it was believed, will be unable to establish sinking funds as provided for by the Public Utilities Commission regulations, and there may be other difficulties which will affect the larger associations.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, sponsored the $75,000 cash deposit amendment to the insurance act in behalf of the Diamond Cab Association and stoutly fought all efforts of other House members and Senators to modify it.

Fears were expressed at the time that the amendment would give the larger cab associations such an advantage that a local monopoly might be created.

Since then, however, the Public Utilities Commission and the superintendent of insurance have so interpreted the law that many of the threats to the independents have been removed to the dismay of the big associations.

Restricted to 1,000.

First, by restricting any cab association to 1,000 members, the commission blasted the hopes of the Diamond concern to absorb the more financially sound independents.

Then by breaking down the $75,000 cash deposit clause to give owners of a few cabs an opportunity to set up smaller sinking funds, the commission took away another advantage of the big associations.

As the superintendent of insurance has decreed that no one may sell insurance to District cab owners for less than $21 a month, there will be no cut-rate blanket policies for the larger organizations.

Meanwhile, it was the consensus of the leading operators that the question of increased fares should wait, at least, until after the act becomes operative and it is known how many cab drivers comply with it.

The 298-foot craft was launched in October, 1937, and commissioned last month.

Dr. Chas. Butler, Keller Church Founder, Dies

Heart Ailment Is Fatal at 77; Was Ill Two Months.

The Rev. Charles Butler, 77, pastor emeritus of the Columbia Heights Lutheran Church and founder and first pastor of the Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, died yesterday at his residence, 1427 Montague street northwest, after an illness of more than two months. Death was due to heart disease.

A native of Washington, Dr. Butler was the son of the late Rev. Dr. J. G. Butler, pastor of the Luther Place Memorial Church. He was graduated from Columbian College, now George Washington University, in 1882, and received his A. B. from Amherst in 1883. He then was graduated from Gettysburg Seminary and the Union Theological Seminary, in New York City.

In 1891 Dr. Butler was instrumental in the founding of the Keller Church. He occupied the pulpit there until 1907. He then went to assist his father at the Luther Place Church.

He was called to the pulpit of the Columbia Heights congregation in 1909, and was retired in 1931, and since that time had spent his hours in research and in carrying on his duties as one of the chaplains on the staff of St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Dr. Butler was a trustee of the Internation Reform Federation, and an active member of the District of Columbia Antisaloon League. He suffered a heart attack while driving his automobile nine weeks ago.

Surviving Dr. Butler are his widow, Mrs. Helena Butler; a daughter, Mrs. Edward M. Barron; a son, the Rev. J. G. Butler, of New Haven, Conn.; a sister, Mrs. Phillip Affleck, and a brother, Dr. William K. Butler, a physician.

Funeral services will be held at the Luther Place Memorial Church tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Officiating will be Dr. Butler's son, Dr. L. M. Zimmerman, a life-long friend, and Dr. Edward Goetz, president of the Lutheran Ministerial Association. Pallbearers will be members of the association. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Harriet W. Connell, of New York City.

W. L. Dement, Philanthropist, Is Dead at 82

La Plata Resident Was Civic Leader; Rites Tomorrow.

William L. Dement, 82, one of the oldest residents of Charles County, Md., whose memory extended back to the days when he was a little boy and Federal soldiers combed southern Maryland for John Wilkes Booth, died yesterday at his residence, 1348 Park place northwest, after a lingering illness.

A member of one of the most distinguished families in the county, Mr. Dement was a son of William Edward Dement, who served in the Mexican War, and was a prominent Confederate sympathizer during the War Between the States.

Mr. Dement was born at Friendship, the old Dement homestead and at the time one of the show places of Maryland.

He often recalled, as a boy not yet 10, he had seen Union officers searching for fugitives on his father's and neighboring plantations. When President Lincoln was assassinated, the soldiers in blue searched the Dement homestead for Booth.

In 1886 he moved to Mississippi, and in 1891 he married Miss Pearl Harris, of Bolton, Miss. He then returned to Maryland, settling in La Plata.

For decades he conducted a general store there. He was noted for his interest in the community and his philanthropic works.

Surviving Mr. Dement are his wife; a son, Charles Dement, and two daughters, Mrs. Frank A. Bolton and Miss Elise Dement. He also leaves a brother, C. E. Dement, and four sisters, Mrs. J. B. Mattingly, Mrs. B. H. Padgett, Mrs. Mary L. Padgett and Mrs. Katherine Sanders, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at the Hines undertaking establishment tomorrow at 2 p. m. to be followed by burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Funeral Is Today For E. T. Stakes

Funeral services for Edward T. Stakes, who died yesterday, will be held at 7:30 p. m. today at W. W. Chambers Co. funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest. Burial will take place in Bethany Baptist Church Cemetery, Callao, Northumberland Co., Va., at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Born in Warsaw, Northumberland County, 53 years ago, Mr. Stakes came to Washington in 1915 as an automobile salesman.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nettie R. Stakes; four sons, Edward T., jr., John W., A. Garrison and Richard S. Stakes; three sisters, Mrs. Emily Huntington, of Huntington, W. Va.; Mrs. W. T. Haney, of Irvington, Va., and Mrs. Esther Snow, of Remo, Va., and a brother, Perry Stakes, of Detroit.

Dr. Charles Herty, Pioneer in Paper Pulp, Dies at 71

Savannah, Ga., July 27 (AP).—Dr. Charles H. Herty, 71-year-old chemist who pioneered in the development of paper pulp from Southern pine trees, died today.

Born at Milledgeville, December 4, 1867, Dr. Herty was graduated from the University of Georgia in 1886. He received his Ph. D. degree at Johns Hopkins, Baltimore, in 1890.

He taught at the University of Georgia until 1892, when he left to work with the United States Bureau of Forestry. In 1906 he developed a special type of turpentine cup for the naval stores industry.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Ferde Grofe conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Wednesday night in the sixth summer concert at the Potomac Watergate, with Emerson Myers as piano soloist. Program: "Mardi Gras" from "Mississippi" Suite, "Sob Sister" from "Tabloid" Suite (Grofe), Melodies of Stephen Foster (arr. Guzman), "Hollywood" Suite (Grofe), "Rhapsody in Blue" (Gershwin), "Symphony in Steel" (Grofe), "Negro Heaven" (Cesana), "On the Trail" and "Cloudburst" from "Grand Canyon" Suite (Grofe).

Attendance records at the Potomac Watergate concerts reached a new high last night when a concourse of auditors estimated at 18,000 greeted Ferde Grofe and gave him a hearty welcome as guest conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra. All tickets were exhausted by the demand and more than 1,000 were turned away to find what vantage point they could for listening.

In one respect, the occasion might be called a festival of contemporary American music in the popular vein, for with the single exception of a melange of Stephen Foster's tunes, ingeniously instrumented by Luis Guzman, of the United States Marine Band, not a composition on the program was more than 14 years old. Substract as well Otto Cesana's "Negro Heaven," and the remainder constituted a Ferde festival, since his hand had written it all, even the orchestration of George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

In fact, the predominance of modern idiom made Stephen Foster seem curiously out of place, his directness and simplicity somewhat bewildered by the sophistications of jazz. It is true that he wrote songs for Christy's Minstrels, but one would like to know what he would think of the strange things that have happened to music.

One need hardly say that the best number on the program was the "Rhapsody in Blue" which bids fair to endure as that contradiction in terms, a jazz classic. There is a genuine inspirational spontaneity in this music, a rhapsodial fervor of contagious quality. Emerson Meyers, whose admirable pianistic talent is usually devoted to other types of composition, entered temporarily a Gershwinian phase of syncopated eloquence, and gave a spirited performance of the solo part.

Ferde Grofe has an unquestionable cleverness in all the tricks of orchestration and his legerdemain produces piquant effects. His music as a whole is, however, superficially descriptive with very little emotional content, and the thematic ideas are tenuous. Of the various works he presented from his own shelf, the most interesting was the tone-poem, "Symphony in Steel," which captivates attention with a vigorous middle section in five-time and some imitative noises of extra-musical character.

The least entertaining was the "Hollywood" suite, which conveys to a certain extent the confusion from which cinema pictures emerge. Its explosive dissonances remind me of George Antheil's "Ballet Mecanique," and the five movements have some tedious moments which need curtailing.

"On the Trail" had its usual winning way with the audience, and Mr. Grofe repeated it when he was recalled at the close of the concert. One cannot help but feel that some of the attractiveness of this humorous piece owes a debt to Dukas, for the rhythm and the orchestration bring to mind a vision of the sorcerer's apprentice riding a burro on the precipitous descent in the Grand Canyon.

WASHINGTON'S HOME NEWSPAPER.

Greenberg Excels Ruth's Mark as Nats Lose, 9 to 4

Sports — The Washington Post — Sports

 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1938 19

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, Mich., July 27.—For a 'guess hitter, Hank Greenberg seems to be doing all-ll right. Today he finds himself ahead of Babe Ruth's home-run pace of 1927, and if anybody is to eclipse the Babe's mark of 60 home runs in a season, that fellow is more likely to be Hank Greenberg than anybody else.

POVICH

There is however, one item that is disturbing to the overgrown Detroit first baseman. He doesn't like that label of "guess hitter." He says the people, particularly the baseball writers, are wrong about that.

"What is all this talk of me being a guess hitter, anyway?" Greenberg was saying with some heat before the game today. "That is a laugh. I'm no more of a guess hitter than any of the rest of 'em. Strictly speaking, we're all guess hitters. We're all trying to guess what kind of a pitch we're going to get."

Grizzled old Bing Miller, coach of the Tigers, who last year rounded out 17 seasons as one of the very good hitters in the big leagues, volunteered some corroboration of Greenberg's remarks.

"Hank's right about that," said Miller. "Show me the guy who isn't guessing up there at the plate, and I'll show you a flock of white blackbirds. I used to guess plenty. Especially on those first two strikes. After that, I tried to guard that dish as best I could. With only one strike left, that's no time to guess.

Hank Has Power.

"There's one difference between Hank and most of the rest of the hitters in this league. If those other guys guess right, they've got a hit. But if Hank guesses right, he's likely to have himself a home run. That's what power means to a guy."

Greenberg's label as a guess hitter sprang undoubtedly from the fact that he received the signs from Third Base Coach Del Baker, whose ability to call pitches long has bordered on the uncanny. But the rest of the Tigers get the same signs. Only Greenberg, however, hits home runs in great profusion.

"Sure, I take the signs from Baker," Hank admitted. "So does every other fellow on the team. But Baker isn't up there swinging that bat for you. And he doesn't call every pitch. He can be wrong, too. You can't pay too much attention to signs, anyway. A fellow would be crazy to do that. That's how guys get beaned and get their skulls fractured—when they're expecting a curve ball and find out too late that it's a fast ball headhigh and inside."

Despite the fact that he is ahead of Ruth's record homer pace, Greenberg is no even-money bet to eclipse the Babe's mark of 60 homers. Because it was late in the season of 1927 that Ruth's home-run total soared. In September of his record-breaking year, he hit 17 homers. Greenberg must quicken his pace.

May Excel Ruth.

Should big Hank, perchance, succeed in setting a new home run mark it will be an accomplishment far greater than Ruth's. For the odds are heavily against a right-handed hitter, what with the fences in every park in the league being handier to left-handed sluggers like Ruth.

But, like Ruth, Greenberg does not require the short fences to achieve his homers. He has the power to hit homers to all fields, right, center or left. Yardage means little to Hank when he connects. The four home runs he hit in the last two days here would have been homers in any park in the league.

The surprising part of Greenberg's home run rampage, however, is the fact that only yesterday did he climb into the .300 circle of hitters. When Ruth was setting his record, the Babe was a .370 hitter. But Hank, despite his homer splurge, has not been getting his hits in any great profusion. Paradoxically, he is suffering the worst year of his big league career in the batting averages.

An impressive batting average would look nice to Hank, but he'd rather have the home runs. "I know that's what I'm getting paid for," he was saying. "Unless I can keep knocking those homers, I can't stay in that big money. Look at the guys who are outhitting me by 20 and 30 points. I'll let 'em keep their big averages and I'll keep my kind of contract."

Nearly Lost by Tigers.

The Tigers all but lost title to Greenberg several years ago through a clerical error in the front office. When the Detroit Club signed Greenberg from the New York sandlots they tendered him a Detroit contract and then sent him to their Beaumont, Tex., farm.

For two years they tried him out with the Tigers, but found no place for him in the line-up. He showed hitting potentialities, but he was a flop as a first baseman. Each time they sent him back to Beaumont.

Had Hank been signed to a Beaumont contract the Tigers could have held title to him for six years under the rules—three as a Beaumont player and three as a Tiger—but inasmuch as he had been signed as a Detroit player at he outset, the Tigers ended up with only one more chance for Hank to make good after trailing in two successive years.

In that third and final trial, Hank made it. Long morning hours spent in the Detroit park with park employes batting ground balls to him, improved his fielding amazingly. Bucky Harris, then manager of the Tigers, always did like his hitting. He decided to take a chance on Hank's fielding. For the Tigers, it was a happy decision. Because, look at the guy now.

New York Boxing Commission Refuses to Recognize Hostak

Solons Also Vacate John Henry Lewis' Title and Refuse to Okay Jurich-Kane Fight.

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Sports Writer.

New York, July 27.—Pugilism's championships attained a new height of confusion today when the New York Boxing Commission vacated the light-heavyweight title, withheld recognition of the new middleweight king, and frowned upon a proposed battle for the fly-weight crown.

This left only the heavyweight and bantam rulers free of embroilments.

The commission vacated John Henry Lewis' 175-pound title because the Arizona negro had refused to accept a challenge filed on February 10 by "Tiger" Jack Fox, Spokane negro. The commission claimed that Lewis pretended to be arranging a title defense against Al Gainer, New Haven negro, at Philadelphia. But the Pennsylvania commission informed the New York body that no such match was in the making.

Meanwhile Lewis had accepted a non-title match with Tony Galento, Orange, N. J., Heavyweight, sched-

Army Polo Team Wins

Defeats Maryland Club, 9-8 at East Potomac.

The War Department defeated the Maryland Polo Club yesterday on the East Potomac field, 9-8, to reach the final round of the southeastern circuit matches. The game got off to a slow start but in the second period War Department opened up and scored twice before Maryland had a chance to retaliate.

There were two spills by the War Department players, one in the third chukker when Cadet Milton was knocked off his pony in a close encounter near his goal. In the fifth chukker Capt. Sherburn was thrown from his mount as the pony slipped, but his injuries were slight, so he continued in the game.

Maj. McClure played a sterling game in the back position for the War Department, as did also Capt. Sherburn, in the No. 2 position. Each member of the Maryland team scored one goal.

The War Department team will play the winner of today's game between Third Cavalry, of Fort Myer, and the West Shore poloists, of Camp Hill, Pa., next Sunday on the East Potomac field at 3 o'clock, for the championship of the southeastern circuit.

Billy Shea, District amateur champion; Dick Meyer, District junior titleholder, and the defending champ, Johnny Farrell, of Hillendale, will also be distinct threats for the title. The event is over the 36-hole route.

Tribe Beats Macks, 12-11

Teams Smash 25 Hits in Wild Game.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, July 27.—The Cleveland Indians won a slugging match with the Philadelphia Athletics today, 12 to 11, to remain a game and a half behind the league-leading New York Yankees.

The Tribe used five pitchers and the A's used three. Willis Hudlin, who started for Cleveland, was chased in the first inning after he gave up a walk and three hits. Rookies Zuber, Humphries and Milnar followed. Mel Harder came in for the last out. Milnar was the winner.

Lee Ross hurled for the A's until the Indians' four-run fifth inning. Thomas and Potter followed him and Potter was the loser.

Sammy Hale opened the third inning with a Cleveland home run and Chapman hit one in the eighth with Johnson aboard on a walk.

Dusek, Olson Headline Mat Program at Arena

Ernie Dusek and Cliff Olson will clash tonight at Turner's Arena, in what might be called the "finals" of Joe Turner's own elimination tournament.

Turner has been trying to find an opponent for a "championship" match with Steve (The Crusher) Casey, recognized world's titleholder along the Bowser circuit, and a few days ago he signed up the Irishman to meet the winner of tonight's match.

Dusek and Olson, in the words of Promoter Turner, a mat addict himself, are "the roughest wrestlers in the business—they don't come any rougher."

Ernie, who looks almost as broad as he is tall, appears to be the favorite, on the strength of his recent upset conquest of the former champion, Danno O'Mahoney. Dusek, in winning, handed O'Mahoney one of his few defeats in this country.

Olson no doubt will resort to his pet trick of gouging Ernie with peanuts and tape. But Ernie will be prepared for such an outburst of villainy.

Olson last week gave further evidence of his tactics by winning from Jack League, of Texas. At one time it appeared Olson would be disqualified.

The reward awaiting the winner is a shot at Casey a week from tonight at Griffith Stadium, where Turner will promote only "championship" matches. Casey is being guaranteed $1,000 for his share of the purse.

Two more Duseks are on the bill. Emil, once a familiar figure, returns to meet Ed Meske. Wally, a first cousin, who is learning fast, meets Paul Boesch, of California, winner of the "battle royal" last Thursday.

Other bouts: Jack League vs. Ed White, Mike Masurki vs. Bill Middlekauff.

First bout is at 8:30.

The Arena has been air cooled with four giant fans, Promoter Turner says.

Floyd Young Bats Bucs to 4-2 Victory

Gets Homer, Single and Fielder's Choice to Trim Phillies.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 27. — Floyd Young batted Pittsburgh to a 4-to-2 victory over the Phillies today, the Pirate second sacker driving in all four runs with a single homer and a fielder's choice.

Young drove in the first Pirate run in the second when he singled after Vaughan had walked and stole second. In the fourth, he slammed his round-tripper into the leftfield stands after Todd had beat out an infield hit.

In the ninth he came up with Vaughn on third by virtue of a walk, infield out and a stolen base, and knocked in the last Pirate run with a hard drive to Mueller at second. Vaughan beat Mueller's throw to the plate.

Russ Bauers held an edge over Southpaw Bill Hallahan and Hugh Mulcahy of the Phils. Bauers yielded only four hits. In the fifth Chuck Klein doubled for the Phillies and eventually scored on Martin's long fly to right. In the sixth Jordan doubled and scored on a single by Pinchhitter Clark. Thereafter Bauers was never in trouble.

Stuhldreher, McMillin Lead Vote for Coach.

Chicago, July 27 (AP).—Two Big Ten coaches held a sizable lead today in first returns on the national poll to select a coach for the collegiate All-Star football team which will meet the Washington Redskins, National Pro League champions, here August 31.

Harry Stuhldreher, of Wisconsin, was on top with 167,629 points and Alvin N. (Bo) McMillin, of Indiana, was second with 134,257.

Raymond (Ducky) Pond, of Yale, and Harry Kipke, former Michigan coach, were third and fourth. Each was almost 20,000 points behind the leaders. A. J. Robertson, of Bradley Tech, was fifth with 79,136 points.

The poll, conducted by the Chicago Tribune and 150 associated newspapers, will close midnight August 7.

'Skins Sign Big Halfback

Gilbreath, Ex-Texas Star, Weighs 208.

Irvin Gilbreath, 208-pound former halfback from the University of Texas, has signed a 1938 contract, according to announcement made by the Washington Redskins last night.

Slinging Sammy Baugh interested Gilbreath in the Redskins and has indorsed him highly to the Washington management. Baugh, the former Texas Christian All-American, played against Gilbreath during the seasons of '34, '35 and '36.

Last year, his first out of school, Gilbreath turned down a contract with the Philadelphia Eagles to study law and accept an assistant coaching job at the University of Texas.

Baugh described Gilbreath as one of the hardest running and blocking backs he ran up against during his collegiate career in the Southwest Conference. Playing right halfback, Gilbreath upset many scoring plays with his superb blocking and ball carrying. He will report here about August 5, several days before the Redskins begin working out at Ballston Stadium in preparation for the All-Star game in Chicago, August 31.

Sundra Pitches, Bats Yanks To 7-5 Victory Over Browns

Relief Hurler Throws 3 2-3 Hitless Innings and Drives in Winning Tallies.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 27.—Rookie Steve Sundra, who has been pretty much of a "bust" all season, came through in a large way today and personally led the New York Yankees to a 7 to 5 victory over the Browns.

Rushed into the game in the sixth inning, when the Brownies had the score tied, one out and the bases loaded on Young Joe Vance, Sundra tossed hitless ball over the last 3 2-3 innings. Then he hit a homer in the seventh to break the tie, and in the ninth he singled to drive in the final run. Lou Gehrig also hit a homer—his sixteenth of the year.

The victory, third straight for the Yanks over the Brownies, left Murderers' Row a game and a half in front of the second place Cleveland Indians. The contest was to have been the first game of a double-header, but rain forced a postponement of the scheduled nightcap.

The pitching starters both were strangers to Sportsmans Park. Vance, who had a brief trial with the Yanks late last season, made his first start since his recall from Kansas City Sunday. Fred Johnson, who went the route for the Brownies, was recently brought up from Toledo.

The Yanks climbed aboard Johnson in the second inning for three runs, with George Selkirk's single, Joe Gordon's fly and the first of

Bees Defeat Reds Twice

MacFayden, Fette Give 5 Hits, Win, 1-0, 5-1.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 27.—With Danny Macfayden and Lou Fette pitching 5-hit ball in their respective games, Casey Stengel's Boston Bees today stepped out of the jinx column, winning a double-header over the Cincinnati Reds, 1-0 and 5-1.

In the first game, "Deacon" Danny, avenging the hand injury he suffered when the Reds last visited Boston, made it his eighth victory for the year at the expense of Big Jim Weaver, who was replaced by Gene Schott in the eighth inning.

The Bees, with several fine scoring chances cashed in on but one of them—in the fifth frame, when Vince DiMaggio's clean single to left scored Elbie Fletcher from third. They got seven hits.

In the second, backing up Fette's fine hurling, the Bees made eight blows, getting the jump early by piling up a 3-0 lead in the second inning, and scoring one run in both the third and seventh frames. Myers' homer in the third saved the Reds from a shut-out, as Fette held such sluggers as Berger and Lombardi in close check. Berger went hitless in eight times at bat, and only once hit out of the infield.

Miss Kibler In Net Final

Harriet Williams Is Foe in Match Today.

Dorothy Kibler of Burroughs Playground and Harriet Williams of Chevy Chase quickly regained their form after a week's layoff due to rain and yesterday moved easily into the final round of the department of playgrounds girls tennis tournament. They will meet for the title tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at Chevy Chase Playground.

Miss Kibler blasted Betty Jacob of Montrose out of the tourney with a steady, strong game that brought her victory by 8—6, 6—0 scores. Miss Kibler's Burroughs running mate, Rosaline Pope, fell victim to Harriet Williams' fine stroking in the other semi-final match. The scores were 6—2, 6—0.

Miss Kibler has advanced without strenuous competition from the first round, but her decisive victory over Miss Jacob came as something of a surprise. The latter, veteran of several playground tourneys and member of a prominent Georgetown tennis family, put up a stiff fight in the first set. In the second she faltered badly.

Miss Kibler's service became faster and more accurate in the second stanza and with this as her principal weapon, she won, almost as she pleased. Miss Jacob seemed off form and unable to regain her stride.

Marked as the dark horse since the opening of the tournament, Miss Williams, the attractive Chevy Chase lassie, met little opposition from Miss Pope. In fact, spectators who contrasted her game with Miss Kibler's predict a spirited battle in tomorrow's final.

Big Inning Gives Cards 7-0 Victory

St. Louis Scores 7 Times in Sixth to Blank the Slipping Giants.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 27.—The St. Louis Cardinals combined a timely attack with a pair of enemy errors in a big sixth inning splurge today to wallop the Giants, 7 to 0, behind long Lonnie Warneke's four-hit pitching.

It was the Giants' fifth straight setback, and left them five games behind the National League leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Cards scored all their runs in the sixth inning. Dick Bartell and Johnny McCarthy committed the errors which prolonged the inning, and five hits, one of them Don Padgett's homer with two aboard, brought the runs around.

Outfielder Jojo Moore and Catcher Harry Danning, both of whom have been side-lined with ailments for some time, returned to the Giant line-up, but proved of little use to the Terrymen's cause.

Michigan Ignores Ban on Adamick

Detroit, July 27 (AP).—Frank Macdonell, chairman of the Michigan boxing commission, refused today to back the Illinois suspension of Jimmy Adamick as a result of his fight with Jack Trammell in Chicago last June.

"After looking over the testimony of the Adamick-Trammell case," Macdonell said, "I can find no evidence to incriminate Jimmy Adamick.

"He is free to fight in Michigan, subject to the discretion of the Michigan Athletic Board of Control. If the National Boxing Association does not agree with my decision, Michigan will withdraw from the N. B. A."

Tigers Blast 4 Hurlers to Win Handily

Lawson Goes Full Route for Bengals, Holds Griffmen Safe.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, July 27.—Home runs Nos. 32 and 33 rocketed from the bat of big Hank Greenberg before two innings had been completed this afternoon and the Nats, reeling from those two soporific socks, were pummeled into a 9-4 defeat.

Greenberg made a shambles of the ball game with his pair of productive clouts, brought his total of homers to four in two days, and is now seriously threatening the home-run record of Babe Ruth. At this date in 1927, when Ruth set his mark of 60 homers, he boasted, like Greenberg, 33 of the four-base swats. But Greenberg, on the basis of games played, is ahead of Ruth's pace. He has hit his homers in 88 games, whereas Ruth did not achieve his thirty-third until his ninety-first game.

Brings in 5 Runs.

Big Hank didn't discriminate between Washington pitchers. He knocked his first homer against Monte Weaver in the first inning and then in the second inning, when Pete Appleton showed up on the mound for Washington, Greenberg, as we were saying, didn't discriminate.

Before the second inning had run its course, Greenberg had knocked in five runs for the Tigers. His first-inning homer, a towering loft into the short leftfield bleachers, drove Bill Rogell and Charley Gehringer across the plate ahead of himself.

Only Gehringer was on base when big Hank connected in the second inning, but that was the best of his homers. In comparison, his first-inning

Fighting Fox Takes Second; Esposa Third

Savage Beauty Noses Out Third Party in Race at Saratoga.

By the Associated Press.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 27.—War Admiral, out of the money only once in his career and that in the recent Massachusetts Handicap, returned to his winning ways today with a hollow triumph in the Wilson Mile at Saratoga.

The Man o' War colt from Samuel D. Riddle's barn, carrying a lighter than usual burden of 126 pounds in the weight-for-age event, ran the distance in 1:39 2-5 over a spotty track that was muddy in some parts, good in others and possibly fast on the extreme outside.

The condition of the track made no difference to the little bay, however, as Charlie Kurtsinger shot him to the front soon after the start. He stayed there all the way and finished six lengths in front of William Woodward's 3-year-old Fighting Fox.

The Fox ran out on entering the backstretch after leaving the barrier in front but managed to finish second a length and a half in front of William Ziegler, jr.'s Esposa, the only other starter and winner of the stake last year.

War Admiral closed at 3 to 5 in the betting, good odds considering the fact that he was unbeaten last year and won 11 straight races before finishing fourth in the Massachusetts Handicap, which was run over a heavy track. The purse of $2,925 boosted his earnings for the year to $60,175 and for his racing career to $241,725.

There was little to the running of the race. The Admiral, as usual, was mean at the post but got away well in motion. Jimmy Stout shot The Fox into command but when Woodward's colt ran out, Kurtsinger sent the Admiral to the front. Kurtsinger rated his mount along to the three-quarter pole and then let him out. He drew away easily, while The Fox quit after recovering from the several lengths lost when he ran out.

Savage Beauty Wins In a Photo Finish.

Salem, N. H., July 27 (AP).—With both riders kicking and shoving all the way down the stretch, W. L. Brann's Savage Beauty today was victorious over R. S. Clark's Third Party in the photo finish that decided the $2,500 added Matron's Handicap, mile and a sixteenth feature at Rockingham Park.

On the outside at the finish line, the picture showed Savage Beauty a nose in front of Third Party, but when the numbers were hung up the crowd vociferously expressed its disapproval.

Savage Beauty paid $3.12 to win. Third Party paid $3.26 to place while finishing two lengths and a half in front of Mrs. S. Orr's Lady Montrose. There was no show betting on the race, only four horses accepting the issue.

The race was a ding-dong affair all the way, with first Third Party and then Savage Beauty taking the lead. Going into the clubhouse turn, Third Party led the way, but Savage Beauty was close at hand on the outside, and midway on the backstretch the W. L. Brann miss showed her nose in front.

Going into the far turn, Third Party was again in the lead by the slightest of margins, but Savage Beauty resumed the lead as the field rounded the turn into the home stretch. They came down in front of the stand locked together, with the final decision still in abeyance as they hit the wire.

It was Savage Beauty's first win in three starts this year. The $1,915 that the stake was worth to her brought her earnings for the year to $2,915.

Oh, for the Life of a College Football Ace! Look at What This One Has to Do Every Day

Bob Nowaskey, George Washington University footballer, is working his way through summer school in this fashion: Left—He sorts salads at the restaurant where he works for his meals. Center—He handles towels in the locker room at East Potomac Park Pool, where he is an attendant. Right—Bob pushes a lawn mower on the G. W. U. campus.

"Oh, for the life of a college football player!" Oh, yeah!

Would you like to trade places this summer with Bob Nowaskey, crack George Washington University footballer, while Washington swelters under a 95 degree temperature? Chances are you wouldn't . . .

During the spring term he fell below the average required at George Washington and must attend summer school to raise his scholastic rating. The penalty he pays for this classroom deficiency is that he must stand the expense of his own tuition, as well as living expenses, during the summer, although he attends regularly on a football scholarship.

The department of athletics sees that Bob gets employment to defray these expenses. But he has a rather stiff schedule worked out for July and August when he might be visiting the old swimmin' hole at home.

This is Bob's schedule:

6-8 a. m.—He slings hash, carries trays or peels spuds in a campus restaurant to earn his meals.

9 a. m.—Noon. He works as a locker room attendant at East Potomac Park swimming pool, renting lockers, checking clothes and bundles, and dishing out towels.

1:30 to 4:30 p. m.—He cuts the grass on the acre campus at George Washington. This is his principal job, for which he is solely responsible, and his work is under the constant scrutiny of more than 1,200 students and a large faculty.

5 to 7 p. m.—He attends classes in education.

After 7 o'clock his time is his own, although he must spend his evenings with that 5:30 a. m. rising hour in mind. And of course much of this time is given to study.

His classes and lawn-moving job run only five days a week, but he makes up for this on weekends by working ten hours each Saturday and Sunday at the swimming pool, where he must help handle crowds of more than 3,000 each day.

Can this be the life of football hero you say? Certainly! Bob, who enters the junior class in September, packs 190 pounds, which he uses to decided advantage at end or fullback. This raw-boned youngster comes from Scottdale, Pa., and will play regularly on an eleven that tackles, among others, Ole Miss, Kansas, Bucknell, West Virginia and Clemson.

And Bob is thriving on this summer routine! He's put on 8 pounds since June 20!

Yanks

Vance's two doubles bringing the tallies across. The Brownies came right back for four markers of their own in the third and led until Gehrig's round tripper in the fourth tied the score.

Vance's double and Tommy Henrich's single sent the Yanks in front in the fifth, but again the Brownies knotted the count. That situation lasted until Sundra got his bat working in the seventh.

Boxing

uled for last night at Philadelphia. This match was cancelled because of Galento's illness.

Lewis claims he has not violated the six-months title defense requirement because he defended against Emilio Martinez at Minneapolis on April 25. The New York commission did not recognize that as a title match, because Fox was the No. 1 challenger.

Chairman John J. Phelan suggested today that Fox, Gainer, Gus Lesnevich, of New Jersey, and Emilio Bettina, of Beacon, N. Y., fight it out for the vacated title. Promoter Mike Jacobs said he would try to pair the quartet in two elimination bouts at Madison Square Garden in late August, with the winners to meet for the title in October.

The commission withheld recognition of Al Hostak, of Seattle, who last night scored a first-round knockout over Middleweight Champion Freddie Steele in a title fight at Seattle. The commission insisted that Hostak was not the No. 1 challenger. It will recognize no champion until Fred Apostoli, of San Francisco, meets Young Corbett, of Fresno, Calif., and the winner of that bout fights Hostak for the title. If Hostak declines, then the Apostoli-Corbett winner will be declared champion.

The commission turned thumbs down on a proposed bout between Jackie Jurich, of San Jose, Calif., and Peter Kane, of England, to be staged next month in London for Benny Lynch's vacated flyweight title. The commission suggested that Jurich, Kane, Small Montana, Katsumi Moriaka and Little Dado fight through eliminations for the 112-pound toga.

Meanwhile the commission will refrain from considering the featherweight title situation until after Henry Armstrong, who wears both the feather and welter crowns, tries to add Lou Ambers' lightweight bonnet to his collection on August 10 at the Polo Grounds. Armstrong won the feather title from Petey Sarron last October and hasn't defended it since. Many believe he no longer can pare down to the 126-pound limit.

As the Ambers-Armstrong lightweight tilt approaches, managers of the two champions are embroiled over just what titles will be at stake in the bout. Amber's pilot, Al Weill, says he will claim Armstrong's welter title if Ambers beats him because Ambers will be under the welter limit as well as the lightweight limit; hence the title must pass. But Chairman Phelan says only one title can be at stake in a fight although there is no rule in the New York code that specifically covers this particular situation.

Only Heavyweight Joe Louis and Bantam Champion Sixto Escobar are not involved in title difficulties at the moment.

Willis Hurd, Jr., Leads Public Links Tournament With 155 Total

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

By Way of Deivrsion.

New York, July 27.—There are times when I feel very much like the elevator operator who was tired of it all. He had been running the lift, as we say in London, for several years, when suddenly he decided to chuck it.

VIDMER.

"Up 'n' down, up 'n' down all the time," he muttered, "alway th' same thing over and over again, Nothin' but up 'n' down, up 'n' down, up 'n' down."

"Well, what kind of a job do you want?" asked his patient friend, to whom the complaints had been uttered.

"Aw, I dunno. Maybe a job on the shuttle train, maybe. Yeah, that would be different. Then I could go back 'n' forth, back 'n' forth."

* * * *

So when I get tired writing about sports, I pick up the current magazines and read them, just by way of diversion. For instance, there was an article in Collier's a short time back by Rogers Hornsby denouncing the growing circus tendencies in baseball. He declared that night baseball, foot races, fireworks, band concerts and such added attractions were not a part of the great national pastime and that the only consistent way to draw the crowds was through a winning ball club.

This article, no doubt, was written during the Rajah's term of service as a coach with the Baltimore Orioles, but when it appeared on the streets, oddly enough, he was manager of the Chattanooga Lookouts, of the Southern Association. Of course, nothing may appear odd about this to the naked eye, but those who are familiar with the practices of Joe Engel, president of the Chattanooga club, might find it at least a bit ironic, for Joe is the greatest showman in baseball.

By Way of Ballyhoo.

One of his first stunts after taking charge of the Lookouts was to trade a ball player for a turkey. On another occasion he hung hundreds of canary cages in the grandstands to amuse the customers. Later he acquired a mudcat band, composed of five black-faced boys, and it accompanied the team wherever it went, not to mention putting on command performances for "Mistah Joe" at very odd hours of the day and night.

They started calling him the Barnum of Baseball in the Southland and when the next season opened Joe came riding onto the field on the back of an elephant, with the mudcat band riding behind him. Once he had a girl pitcher on the club.

Every time the public is attracted by any special event, Joe puts in his bid for the Chattanooga Baseball Club. His most recent effort was in the nature of a cable to Douglas Corrigan, offering him a job as second baseman.

"He might run the bases backward," someone suggested, remembering that he started for California and landed in Ireland.

That caused Joe to pause and ponder, but only briefly.

"What's the difference?" he asked. "It would be a novelty."

So Hornsby's article in Collier's gave me a chuckle because I didn't agree with him, but because there's one thing more for the unfortunate Rajah to explain to his boss.

Dean Goes to Bat.

And then there's another article by Dizzy Dean in this week's "Liberty" in which he claims he was not a 'pop-off' by nature but only because the owners of the St. Louis chain gang saw publicity value with resultant increased gate receipts in his antics and answers.

The famous Diz charges Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey with giving him instructions to do Dizzy things, like comparing himself to Mathewson and Alexander and Walter Johnson, giving himself none the worse of it; like predicting that his kid brother, Paul, would be the greatest pitcher in baseball next to himself; like saying silly things and standing for sillier ones that were put in his mouth by others. Diz gives the Cardinal bosses credit for planning to have his wedding at the home plate before a night game in Houston, only he balked at that.

But Dean, going into his impoverished childhood, explaining that he joined the army at the age of 16 to relieve the pressure at home and explaining that John McGraw chased him out of the park in San Antonio when he tried to interest the Giants in his ability as a pitcher, pictures himself, in rather astonishing language, as a serious minded fellow, who has been forced to wear the cap and bells so that others might get rich.

I didn't get much of a chuckle out of that. Somehow it didn't seem to ring quite sincere, for I've heard the Dean pop-off without any prompting and found it fun. And when I finished his confession, I felt like pleading, "say it ain't so, Diz. Say it ain't so."

Jimmy Gipe In 2d Place; Scores Soar

Andy Oliveri Third, Two Tie for Fourth at East Potomac.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Willis Hurd, jr., golfing student of George Washington University, totaled 155 for 36 holes over the East Potomac layout yesterday to pace the field of 100 in quest of the District Public Links Championship, after one of highest scoring days in local tournament history.

Only seven of the starters averaged better than 80 for the dual rounds, and nearly half the field reported no cards as the additional length, out of bounds stakes and new traps made the course several shots higher.

In addition the pins were placed in the toughest spots possible in an effort to run the scores to a new high, and the players were not allowed to clean their balls on the greens despite the recent nine-day rain that softened the course. Time and again the participants putted with pieces of mud as big as a thumb clinging to their ball.

Jimmy Gipe, Navy machinist, Harding Cup team member last year and winner of the Washington Invitation medal in May, trailed the first day medalist with a pair of 78's, a stroke ahead of the favored Andy Oliveri, who was 79 and 78 for a 157 total.

The former Harding Cup team members—Pat Axtell and Bradley Burrows—were bracketed at 158, still within striking distance of Hurd and in a good spot to finish among the first four. Vic Jones and Bob Morris cracked the 160 mark by a stroke, while Harry Saunders, after posting the second lowest score in the morning with a 77, scored to 83 in the afternoon.

Lots of Scoring!

Hurd's score is just 14 shots over the leading score at the half-way mark last year, 141's of Oliveri and Three-Time Champion Claude Rippy, who is not defending his title. The tournament committee's effort to stamp out the low scoring will be apparently successful, as a 305 score should win the title, and 312 may gain a berth among the low four that go to Cleveland as the guests of S. G. Leoffler, sr.

Hurd played the D course in 41 in the morning, 5 over par, including a 6 on the par 4 ninth hole. He rallied with a 38 coming back to post a 79, there shots behind Burrows and Lefty Phenix, who were temporary leaders with 76s.

Axtell Makes Comeback.

Hurd went 3 over on D course in the afternoon, but returned over B course in 37 for a 76 and the lead. Burrows and Hurd were the only players able to come within a stroke of par over the day's play.

Gipe had a 38 and 40 on each nine for his 156 total, while Oliveri was consistent with 39-40-40-38. Axtell, a Barbecue employe, made one of the finest comebacks of the day, tying Burrows for fourth after starting with a 43. His next rounds were two 38's and a 39. Burrows jumped to 82 in the afternoon after his initial pace-setting round.

Bobby Burton, third place finisher last year and a member of several previous Harding Cup teams, led the casualty list with 85-79, 164, while Sam Parks had 88-78, Alfred Shorb 83-88, and Jim Sweatte, the Leapley brothers, W. W. Seay and S. G. Loeffler, jr., were among the low cards.

Earl Skinker, 16-year-old junior member of the Columbia Club, played and scored 77-84 but his entry was disallowed by the tournament committee.

Thirty-six holes over the heavy course will crown a new champion today.

Japanese Netmen Favorites To Defeat Canadians Today

Nakano and Yamagishi Expected to Sweep Davis Cup Zone Play Opening in Montreal.

By the United Press.

Montreal, July 27.—Japan enters tomorrow's North American zone Davis Cup first-round matches against Canada 2-to-1 betting favorites to win the series and the right to meet the winner of the Australian-Mexico series which opens Friday.

Canada's three-man team, comprised of Bob Murray, Ross Wilson and Laird Watt, is conceded but little chance of defeating Fumiteru Nakano and Jiro Yamagishi, who will handle both the singles and doubles assignments for Japan.

Wilson and Watt were given the doubles match assignment, Wilson also will play in singles matches, meeting Nakano in tomorrow's opening match being pitted against Yamagishi Saturday. Bob Murray, Canada's No. 1 ranking singles player, will hold the other singles berth.

This year's play will represent Canada's first return to Davis Cup play in four years. The Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, after a long series of humiliating defeats, withdrew the Canadian team in 1934. Since that time they have concentrated in building a strong team. Murray, Watt and Wilson are at top form after a long series of tournaments in the eastern United States and Bermuda. They are believed to form the strongest team that Canada has entered for the past several years.

Murray is expected to win his match against Nakano, but is given but little chance of beating Yamagishi, Japan's singles titleholder. Canada's doubles team, which recently won the Maryland State championship, is given a remote chance of winning their match against the Nipponese, but at best, it is believed, Canada will lose the series, 3-2. Wilson is expected to lose his match against Yamagishi, but is given a slight chance of beating Nakano.

For the past ten days Fred Perry, former world's No. 1 ranking amateur, has been coaching the Canadian team and putting them through a series of stiff practices. And, if ever a Canadian team had any chance of moving further into the series, it is this one, experts say.

Pepco Nine Captures Second Half Crown

In addition to pitching four-hit ball, Bill Helmer, Pepco hurler, singled to score Danny Dansburger with the winning run after the latter had doubled to open the sixth frame, and the Gas Company nine bowed, 2-1. It was Pepco's eleventh straight victory and the win clinched the second-half Commercial League title.

Mel Hein to Play Again With New York Giants

New York, July 27 (AP).—Mel Hein, for the last five years center on the National Football League's all-star eleven, has decided to play with the New York Giants again this year.

The former Washington State center, who has played seven seasons with the Giants, first wrote John Mara, president of the club, that he would not return. However, today he wired he had reconsidered and would be on hand when the Giants start training August 15.

The word from Hein and the receipt of Leland Shaffer's signed contract increased the list of veterans who will return to 23.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month.")

Buddy Lewis takes undisputed lead in the Man of the Month contest by virture of his hitting in yesterday's game with the Tigers, but Cecil Travis was the outstanding hero of the Nats in that game.

To Travis, five points, because he made three of the Nats' nine hits, one a double far against the fence in right center.

To Lewis, two points, because he figured in the first Washington run with a perfect bunt in the third inning and doubled to right in the fifth.

To Taft Wright, two points, because he made good again as a pinch hitter with a single that scored a Washington run in the sixth.

To Sammy West, one point, because with his lone hit of the day he drove in the Nats' first run.

Nedomatsky Here Monday

Ex-Terp Meets Mamakos in Eight-Rounder.

The fight Washingtonians have been expecting for four months will take place next Monday night at Griffith Stadium, where Ivan Nedomatsky, former Southern Conference champion, and Steve Mamakos, will come to blows in an 8-rounder.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn finally received signed contracts of the two fighters yesterday.

The District Boxing Commission gave immediate approval.

Nedomatsky, developed by Col. Heinie Miller, boxing commission secretary, at the University of Maryland. He won three Southern Conference crowns. His college days over, Nedo was signed up by Pete Reilly, who turned him over to Heinie Blaustein, Baltimore trainer-manager.

Monday night's match will mark Nedomatsky's first as a headliner in Washington. In his four local appearances Nedomatsky whipped Hunter Crostic, Joey Spangler, Eddie Guerra and El Brookman.

Perhaps the most improved fighter here is Mamakos, who emerged from the Golden Gloves ranks to win 10 out of 12 professional bouts. One of his defeats was at the hands of Georgie Abrams.

Mamakos, considered something akin to perpetual ring motion, scored his most impressive victory recently in a rain-drenched battle with Cal Cagney.

In other fights Mamakos beat Battling Burroughs, Vic Finazzo and Wickey Hawkins, Lew Tendler's protege.

Md. Amateurs Show Up District Stars in Open

The 16 "best" amateur golfers in Washington, selected by sports writers to meet Baltimore's finest Sunday at Rolling Road, were shaken from their favorites' roles after comparing the amateurs' finish in the Maryland Open championship.

Seven members of each team competed and the Baltimoreans won four of the six simon-pure awards. Otto Greiner was first, Bobby Brownall second, Eddie Bean and Spencer Overton tied for third, and Erford Barnes and Jack Fulton were next. Levi Yoder, Kerry Hart and Ralph Quinter and Billy Shea were among those out of the money.

The match will start about 1:30 p. m., and will be decided via the Nassau system of scoring. Overton and Greiner are expected to form the No. 1 duo of the hosts.

Prince Georges to Play.

The Prince Georges Athletic Club nine will meet the Dixie Pig team in a double-header at McGruder Park Sunday, the first game to start at 1 p. m.

Dorothy Kirby Loses First-Round Match to Jane Cothran

Kathyrn Hemphill, Sally Guth and Marion Miley Win in Biltmore Invitation Event.

Asheville, N. C., July 27 (AP).—Jane Cothran, slender sharpshooter from Greenville, S. C., eliminated Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, 5 and 4, in the opening round of match play today in the Biltmore Forest women's invitation golf tournament.

Miss Cothran, who defeated Miss Kirby in the finals last year, went into the lead at the second hole, turned 6-up and closed out the match on the fourteenth with a subpar brand of golf.

Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., whose 2-over-par 80 won the medal yesterday, eliminated Helen Smith, of Greensboro, N. C., 7 and 6. Sally Guth, of St. Louis, considered a tournament dark horse, overwhelmed Mrs. Ellis C. Baum, of New York, 9 and 7.

Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., the Southern champion, went into the second round on a 6 and 5 victory over Eliza Coke, of Asheville. Alliene Hoover, of Thomasville, N. C., defeated Mrs. J. C. Wright, of Atlanta, 6 and 4.

Mrs. Alberta Neblett, of Atlanta, edged out Joy McCann, of Montgomery, Ala., 3 and 2, and Mrs. John Degner 3d, of Charlotte, N. C., vanquished Mrs. R. E. Wilson, of Asheville, 1-up, in a seesaw match. Marion Gayer, of Charleston, S. C., eliminated the veteran Deane Van Landingham, of Charlotte, 4 and 2.

Tomorrow's second round pairings: Hemphill vs. Neblett, Miley vs. Degner, Guth vs. Cothran and Hoover vs. Gayer.

Wheat Prices Advance With Export Sales

Small Gains Follow Drop to Previous Low Levels.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 27.—Buying credited to exporters helped Chicago wheat values score fractional gains today after the market had fallen temporarily to around the season's previous bottom levels.

Some definitely unfavorable crop reports from spring crop areas both sides of the Canadian boundary, together with disappointnig winter wheat harvest returns in Nebraska, were among factors that contributed to price rallies.

Steel Output Continues Rise To 37 Per Cent

Weirton District Leads With Activity at 65 Per Cent.

New York, July 27.—A rise in steel ingot production to 37 per cent, a gain of one point from last week; an increase in sales over June, which at Pittsburgh has amounted to about 30 per cent, and an excited scrap market, which has boosted steel making grades $1 at Pittsburgh and 50 cents at Chicago and Philadelphia, are factors which seem to point to continued improvement, says Iron Age today in its weekly survey of the industry.

"Some steel-making districts have shown fairly sharp gains, notably Chicago, where the rate has risen four points to 38 per cent chiefly because of distribution of steel orders for Southern Railway cars. In the Wheeling-Weirton area a 65 per cent rate has been attained, the best in the country. Detroit, where operations have been at a low rate for many months, is up to 48 per cent from less than 30 per cent owing to resumption of some capacity by the Great Lakes Steel Corporation. The starting up of the Ford steel plant on August 8 will assure a further rise. Some districts have reduced open hearth operations temporarily, having built up stocks of raw steel.

"The most important development in the basing point situation is the elimination of the differentials at Gary over Pittsburgh on tin plate, black plate and special coated manufacturing ternes. Tin plate becomes $5.25 per base box at Pittsburgh and Gary, a reduction of $2 a ton for Western users, while black plate has been placed on a 3.15 cents a pound base at both centers, a reduction of $3 a ton at Pittsburgh and $5 a ton at Gary. The adoption of the $4.65 Pittsburgh price on manufacturing ternes at Gary brings that product down $2 a ton for consumers in that area. The Granite City Steel Co., which has maintained mill base prices $2 a ton over Gary, has made no announcement as to its prices.

"On top of the reductions that have previously gone into effect, these lower prices emphasize the assertions of steel companies that an adjustment in wages or prices must come if they are to make any profits even with a much higher operating rate. Yet no steel company seems to be ready to take the initiative in reducing wages, especially in view of the conferences in Washington this week under the auspices of the public contracts board of the Department of Labor, which has given the steel companies another week in which to present additional wage data. The Inland Steel Co. warned the public contracts board that "present wage rates must be subject to adjustment to meet existing conditions; otherwise prices must be increased in the near future if the industry is to avoid serious losses which will impair its economic position.'

Stocks Suffer Severe Setback as Heavy Selling Forces List Down.

New York, July 27.—The stock market today suffered its severest setback since March 29, which was two days before it made its low for the year. Selling got under way after a show of firmness around the opening and for the first hour, and there was no unusually bearish news to account for the liquidation. The Street was in the same frame of mind as on the previous day, when there was nothing more than general irregularity, or on Monday, when prices advanced.

But such bearish signs as are present were given more importance in trading circles when prices failed to make headway in the first hour. It was noted that even on days of moderate strength the steel shares, which usually are leaders, had been lagging behind.

In addition there are many traders with respectable paper profits and on the least excuse they were more than ready to convert such profits into actual cash. Stop loss orders were touched off as the reaction gained ground and the result was an average loss for the list of 1.48 points, while active speculative leaders were down 1 to 3 points.

Ticker Lags.

Disappointing to the bullish forces was the heavy volume of trading on the decline. A total of 1,973,440 shares changed hands and the ticker was late for a good portion of the session. Shortly before noon it was seven minutes late and to add to the complications there was a mistake in printing the flash quotation on steel.

Some of the selling was excused on the basis that the Street was wondering what would come out of the Chrysler and General Motors meetings. Both big corporations announced their quarterly results after the close. Chrysler showed $1.31 a share earned for the first half, which was $5 less than for the comparable period of last year when the company was experiencing record business.

Improvement Expected.

The best news connected with the report was the statement of K. T. Keller, president, regarding general improvement in business and noting a rapid liquidation of dealers' stock in both new and used cars, with indications that this may contribute to an improved outlook for fall operations. Inventories on June 30 were less than half those on January 1.

General Motors showed earnings for the first half of 66 cents a share, against $2.47 a year ago. Both corporations showed a sharp improvement in the second quarter over the first quarter. Declines in the motor shares were no sharper than in other divisions, Motors selling off 1⅜ and Chrysler 2⅞.

Rail Shares Lower.

Atchison common and preferred were soft features of the rail section when directors took no action on the preferred dividend in order to preserve a sound financial position. The common was down 1¾ and the preferred 3½. Losses of other leading carriers included Central, 1⅜; Baltimore & Ohio, ⅞; Pennsylvania, ⅝; Southern, 1⅜, and Union Pacific, 1⅞.

Only 77 stocks showed plus signs at the close and 759 were off for the session. Steel advanced early on the optimistic statement following Tuesday's meeting of directors, but it was off 2 points at the close and Bethlehem was down about the same.

Selling of securities unsettled commodities, but they rallied later. Wheat fell to around the season's lows, but buying credited to exporters later lifted prices to close up ⅛ to ⅝ cent. Cotton fell 10 to 13 points on weak stocks and improved weather, but then came back on covering the trade price fixing, closing off only 1 to 3 points.

Bond Trading Dull.

Listed bonds were dull today, with the speculative issues inclined to move downward with equities. Railroad bonds in the secondary classifications were hard hit and losses of 1 to 3 points were numerous. United States Treasury bonds were well maintained, and best-grade corporate issues likewise held steady. In the foreign section Japanese bonds remained uncertain and there was little buying of anything but best grades. Turnover in all issues was $8,180,000.

Carrier Liens Lower.

The impressive gains of recent weeks were modified in the carrier division, as points were given up by the active bonds. Most secondary interest-paying rails still are left, however, about half way between highs and lows of the year. No particular distinction was made between the better-rated issues and the borderline bonds. Local tractions drifted a little lower, and communications issues also were soft. Motion picture bonds suffered another relapse.

Treasury Issues Steady.

Long term United States Treasury bonds showed gains and losses in equal numbers, with the largest movement only ⅛ point. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were in better request, however, owing to the larger yields. Counter trading in Treasury notes and bills was brisk, at unchanged levels. Telephone bonds and U. S. Steel debentures were dull at small fractions under recent highs. Best grade power and light issues and other money market bonds likewise held their ground.

Japanese bonds continued their irregular downward movement in the foreign section, with a number of fresh lows recorded. Italian bonds also drifted lower. Polish issues were unsettled and other European default bonds were dull. Latin-American disregarded pledges were neglected. Highest grade foreigns were maintained, with London apparently doing a little buying of Canadians and Australians.

How to Torture Your Husband.

LOOK! SEE THAT PLUG - THE ONE YOU HAD SUCH A STRUGGLE WITH? YOU TOLD ME TO GET AN ELECTRICIAN FOR IT. A FINE MECHANIC YOU ARE! WILLIE FIXED IT - LITTLE NINE YEAR OLD WILLIE. POOH! I'M ASHAMED OF YOU

"The Timid Soul" by Webster Appears in Sunday's Post.

Bob Burns Says—

If you want anything to go unnoticed, put it right out in the open. If you hide it, every thief in the country will start lookin for it. If you walk boldly down the street, nobody'll pay any attention to you, but if you sneak up an alley, everybody'll see you and wonder what you're up to.

The other day, on the set I heard a fella tell a girl, "All that stuff I told you the other night about my past life is a secret—I hope you didn't tell anybody." The girl says, "Oh no—I didn't tell it to a soul—I didn't know it was a secret."

Catholic Drama Urged to Help Faith Defense

Development of Stage Seen as Bulwark at Blackfriar Parley.

Development of the Catholic drama as a bulwark against attacks of God, the church, and the state was urged last night by the Rev. Dr. Ignatius Smith, O. P., dean of the school of philosophy at Catholic University.

Dr. Smith, addressing the first annual conference of the Blackfriars Guild in the University Music Building, warned against the "unholy conspiracy" of pulpit, press, school and stage, against the Catholic Church.

"The Catholic pulpit has been sound, if not efficient, in its protection of God's rights," Father Smith declared, adding that this could not be said of other pulpits. "Many ministers have been associated with liberal movements that border on the radical and, the Red," he charged.

Threefold Attack.

From these ministers, and from the press, the schools and the stage, Father Smith said, have come a threefold attack on God, church and Nation.

"The attack upon God repudiates the divine existence and questions the right of God to the worship of all creation. The attack on our church is a very subtle onslaught on institutions our church has always sought to protect as basic in civilized society. The attack upon our country questions first the need of all government, and repudiates the solid virtues of citizenry without which democracy cannot exist."

To combat these attacks, Father Smith called for "a pulpit which shall be loyal to the rights of God, a press dedicated to the preservation of an intelligent patriotism to country and to God," and, of equal importance, "we must have a consecrated, apostolic stage."

Election Due Today.

The Rev. Dr. T. F. Carey, O. P., of the Washington Blackfriars Guild, pointed out that where the priest has only 10 minutes for a sermon, the theater is a force which holds people for at least two hours. The Rev. Dr. Howard Carroll, of Pittsburgh, declared that the content of plays produced by Blackfriars groups "must be distinctively Catholic, always."

In earlier sessions yesterday, the conference discussed a constitution for the national Blackfriars organization. Adoption of the constitution and election of officers was set for today. Representatives of seven Blackfriars guilds, and a dozen other groups, are attending the conference.

Army Will Attempt To Repel 'Invader' Entering Kentucky

In exercises at Fort Knox, Ky., from September 4 to 25, the Second Army will attempt to repel a theoretical hostile army advancing from the South through Tennessee and threatening industrial areas north of Ohio River, the War Department announced yesterday.

The exercises, part of the Army's general scheme of training officers, will give special consideration to the use and effectiveness of motorized and mechanized forces and signal equipment.

"To test such signal equipment and to familiarize commanders and their staffs in its operation," an official said, "the exercises will make use of the latest developments in this line. Such equipment as mobile radio and teletype will be in use and under test of field service conditions."

The exercises are regarded as an important step in the consolidation of the Regular Army, National Guard and Reserve units of Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, Kentucky, and West Virginia, which compose the Second Army.

Constipated? You Should Get at the Cause!

Lots of people think they can't be "regular" without frequent trips to the medicine chest. "I just dose up and get it over," they tell you. But doctors know they don't "get it over" at all—until they get at the cause of the trouble!

Chances are it's simple to find the cause if you eat only what most people do—meat, bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If that fits you, your ticket is a crunchy breakfast cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the great intestinal tonic, vitamin B_1.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and just watch the old world grow brighter! Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Dr. Kolb Named Mental Hygiene Division's Chief

New chief of the Division of Mental Hygiene, United States Public Health Service, is Dr. Lawrence Kolb, the Treasury announced yesterday. Formerly chief of the P. H. S. Hospital at Lexington, Ky., he succeeds Dr. Walter L. Treadway, now serving as medical officer in charge of the same hospital.

Both appointments are routine changes of station, the announcement said.

Dr. Kolb, who assumes the rank of assistant surgeon general, is an authority in the fields of psychiatry, narcotics and mentality of aliens as related to immigration.

Born in Galesville, Md., he was graduated from the University of Maryland School of Medicine in 1908. In 1934 he was appointed to head the Government's experimental unit for treatment of drug addicts. Previously he had been superintendent of the United States Hospital for Defective Delinquents for two years.

Dr. Treadway had been head of the Mental Hygiene Division since 1930.
